VOTE WILL BE CLOSE ON INCOME

The State Senate acts to-morrow on the Donahue resolutions ratifying the proposed Income Tax amendment to the Federal Constitution. If every Senator records himself, twenty-one votes will pass the measure. The House passed it by a vote of 140 to 84.

Down on State street and Devonshire-street, which are usually pretty good places to get a line on what's going to happen at the State House, they said to-day that the Income Tax will be refused ratification by the Senate to-morrow. The vote is certain to be close—so close that a few letters and post cards from voters to their Senators might be the media' of giving Massachusetts a place among the States to ratify the amendment.

As their minds are made up to-day, seventeen Senators are in favor of the amendment, three are wobbling, with leaning toward favoring it, and twenty are against it.

How they stand:

For the amendment—

Democrats: Curley of Roxbury, Doyle of Boston, Grainger of Winthrop, Hailey of Lawrence, Hatton of Charlestown, Hoar of Concord, Hunt of Worcester, Lomasney of Boston, Mark of North Adams, Malley of Springfield, Murray of Dorchester, Powers of South Boston, Quigley of Holyoke, Timilty of Roxbury.

Republicans: Nason of Haverhill, Newhall of Lynn and Ross of New Bedford. Total—17.

No Democrats Opposed.

Against the amendment—

Democrats: None.

Republicans: Adams of Marblehead, Barnes of Weymouth, Bennett of Saugus, Blanchard of Somerville, Brown of Medford, Chase of Brighton, Denny of Worcester, Draper of Hopedale, Greenwood of Gardner, Keith of Bridgewater, Kenney of Brookfield, Mulligan of Natick, Pearson of Brookline, Schumacher of Fitchburg, Stearns of Cambridge, Tinkham of Boston, Tolman of Gloucester, Treadway of Stoneham, Turner of Fall River, White of Tisbury.

Total—20.

Wavering—Gates of Westboro, Hibbard of Lowell, Nash of Hanover.

Total—3.

Lobbyists for the vested interests which want the Income Tax amendment defeated or ratification by Massachusetts were busy to-day at the State House. They have been busy there, on the hotels where the legislators congregate during recess and after hours, and in the legislators' home districts for many months. They believe their work has been well done and that it will show results on the roll-call in the Senate.

Experts of the tax spent a good deal of time to-day in trying to persuade Senator Melvin O. Nash of Hanover that he ought either to vote against the measure or else dodge the roll-call. Senator Nash was "absent or not voting" when the roll was called on the Income Tax last year. He is one of the best friends the plain people ever had in the State House—in debate. Whether he is a roll-call friend will be determined to-morrow.

Good friends of Senator Joseph S. Going of Fairhaven expressed the hope to-day that Joe will break away from the fat-salaried and fat-fanned lobbyists and be convinced him that the Income Tax would be an awful thing for Massachusetts, and that he would vote accordingly. It is in accordance with the pledge which he made to the people in the memorable Woman Suffrage campaign of 1895. Joe has been returned every year by less than a dozen votes, and is said to owe his election to his Income Tax pledge.

Hope for Independents.

The hope was also expressed to-day that Senator Joseph H. Hibbard of Lowell would vote with the people. Hibbard voted "No" last year. He is chummy with the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company, and the Boston & Northern hasn't registered any lobbyists at the State House in favor of the Income Tax.

It was said to-day that one or two anti-Income Tax Senators might remain out of the Senate chamber to-morrow long enough to compel Speaker Allen F. Treadway to cast his vote against the measure. Treadway will vote if his vote is needed to kill the resolutions, and may vote anyway. The powers which made him president of the Senate are not spending any money to help pass the Income Tax.

It was rumored to-day that Senator Roland Keith of Bridgewater might show a streak of independence to-morrow and vote with the people on the Income Tax. His vote would achieve ratification, provided Nash, Hibbard and Nash vote right. If these four gentlemen vote right, several persons who know something about the State House age prepared to drop dead. They believe that an indorsement of the Income Tax by both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature is impossible. They base this belief on their knowledge of the amount of money which the vested interests have spent to defeat it.

HIGH WIND, COLD AND SNOW FOR BUFFALO

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 2.—This city was visited by a high west wind for several hours last night, which was accompanied by a drop of thirty degrees in temperature. To-day there was flurries of snow.

CLEVELAND DROPS SHORTSTOP KNAUPP

CLEVELAND, May 2.—Shortstop Henry Knaupp of the Naps was released to New Orleans to-day. Shortstop Bill Lindsay of the Pelicans may come to Cleveland.

BOSTON INVITATION TAKEN UP BY GRAND TRUNK OFFICIALS

LONDON, May 2.—Official action by the Board of Directors of the Grand Trunk Railroad on the invitation to the Grand Trunk to come to Boston, is promised by the end of the present week.

The Grand Trunk directors met to-day at the offices of the company in Cockspur street. President Charles M. Hays laid before his associates all the facts available here in connection with the official invitations of the Massachusetts Senate, the House of Representatives and the Boston City Council, as well as the petition of readers of the Boston AMERICAN.

When the meeting was over President Hays said to the AMERICAN correspondent that the board would have no announcement to-day. The invitation had been considered "informally," Mr. Hays said. It is known, however, that the Grand Trunk directors are much pleased by the progress of the Boston movement.

SMALL DECIDES TO APPEAL CASE

Frederick I. Small, who was awarded $10,000 damages by Former Judge Robert O. Harris, now Congressman from the Plymouth district, in his alienation of wife's affections suit against Arthur H. Soden, accepted with the court allowance and will appeal from the decision and ask for a trial by jury.

Attorneys George Libby and Thomas J. Boynton, who are Small's counsel, will file an appeal, it is expected, within a few days. Small asked for $500,000 from Soden.

Congressman Harris heard the case as an auditor. In his decision he said that Small is entitled to damages for the invasion of his rights as a husband, the injury done to his affections and for the shame brought upon him. But he also held that Small was an indifferent husband and not entitled to the damages which an affectionate, tender and considerate husband would deserve. Soden was exonerated from the charge that he had drugged Mrs. Small.

Half a million dollars damages is one of the largest sums ever sued for in an alienation case, and Small was awarded just one-fiftieth of that amount. Soden was famous in baseball as one of the "triumvirate" who formerly owned the Boston National Baseball Club. He got acquainted with Small through the latter's brokerage business.

FRANCONIA HELD IN THE NARROWS

The new giant liner Franconia, sailing on her first westward trip from Boston this noon, was stopped for an hour in The Narrows opposite quarantine. The steamer started all right and steamed down the harbor majestically till she was in The Narrows. Then she halted and did not get under way again until two o'clock. It was thought on shore that the Franconia was having trouble with her steering gear, whether to what she encountered on her maiden voyage over here last week.

The Franconia is bound for Queenstown, Fishguard and Liverpool. If no other delays occur her passengers will arrive in London a week from to-day. This means that Boston is almost two days nearer London than every before. The speed of the new Cunarder and the time saved by the landing at Fishguard effect this saving.

Cheers as Liner Sails.

The sailing of the vessel was the cause of especial enthusiasm. Florists' wagons had brought great loads of flowers to the dock in East Boston, and there was an enormous cheering, flag-waving crowd on hand to bid good-bye to friends.

The Franconia carried 120 first-class, 108 second-class and 600 third-class passengers. What is of a serious commercial interest to Boston, the new liner carried out a profitable cargo of 8,000 tons of exports, including 38,000 bushels of corn, 700 tons of provisions, 300 tons of flour, 1,000 bales of cotton, 500 tons of farming machinery and 200 barrels of apples.

The saloon passengers included many well known and socially prominent persons. Sir Gilbert Carter, formerly British Governor of the Bartsdoes, and Lady Carter, formerly of Boston, and their child, started on their return voyage to their home in England after a visit with Boston friends and relatives. Other passengers were Colonel W. S. Stanton, U. S. A., and his daughter, Miss Katherine Stanton. Colonel G. W. Moses, president of the First National Bank of East Boston; Mrs. William C. Endicott of Salem, mother of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, wife of the Englis statesman; Neal Rantoul of Salem, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and the Misses Leslie and Frances Bradley, and Mrs. Albert H. Hayes of Pasadena, Cal., long their motor car with them on the Franconia, and will motor 5,000 miles over England on returning in the Fall.

Galvin a Passenger.

C. O'Connell Galvin, prominent in the cause of Irish home rule, was a passenger.

There were no happier people on the vessel when the band began to play and the lines were cast off than Captain Smith and his officers, stewards and crew. They have spent a busy time ever since the vessel arrived looking after the great crowds of visitors which came aboard the vessel. It is estimated that 5,000 people visited the Franconia yesterday.

FATHER'S PLEA IS REFUSED IN COURT

George L. Banks of No. 172 Border street, East Boston, appeared in the Suffolk Probate Court to-day, seeking the custody of his two children. He said his children had been told that he was dead in order that they might forget him. Judge George refused to take any action in the matter. He said that Banks was in contempt of court for failing to pay $375 alimony, and that when he purged himself of the contempt by paying the arrears he would then consider the case further.

SKIN-GRAFTING AIDS BROWN BALL PLAYER

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 2.—Eagerness to allow Kenneth Nash, short-stop of the Brown University baseball team, to get back into the game at the earliest possible moment has led four of his college mates to sacrifice a portion of their skin to be grafted on Nash's leg which was hurt in a game with the Providence aastern league team.

SHIP TURNS TURTLE; HER CREW MISSING

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 2.—Turned turtle the wreck of a two-masted schooner, believed to be a trading vessel, was found to-day half a mile out in Lake Michigan off Whitefish Bay. It is feared that the entire crew perished.

EVIDENCE HEARD IN DODGE CASE

GUILDHALL, Vt., May 2.—The trial of Mrs. J. Marshall Dodge for the mysterious murder of William Heath, a painter who was found shot to death in her home at Lunenburg, was begun in earnest here to-day.

The jury which may send the wealthy widow to the scaffold was filled and sworn within an hour after court opened and the State began calling the great array of witnesses in the effort to explain a death that has puzzled all Vermont since the man was found slain by a bullet last September in the home of the most prominent woman church worker in Lunenburg.

Calm and apparently confident of the outcome, the defendant listened to the reading of the indictment which charges her with the killing of Heath. She sat just within the rail and at her side were her daughter, Mrs. Ida Bell, and Mrs. Dale, the wife of her senior counsel.

The spectacle of a woman of means and social prominence, being tried for her life has aroused interest in this State and New Hampshire as no trial in the annals of the two States.

"I am guiltless. I did not shoot Mr. Heath," the attractive, strong featured widow declares again and again.

"Is she guilty and a woman of exceptional coolness and daring playing the part of her life to save herself from the gallows?" is the question on the lips of students of criminology who have attended the greatest trials in this country and the world.

Woman of Mystery.

One of national reputation in the newspaper field also gathered here attending the trial and they have repeatedly asked themselves the same question.

Newspaper editors demand of their reporters, "Is this woman innocent? Is she being persecuted as no woman has ever been persecuted in this State or any other?" There is no answer to the question. No one has dared to answer.

Mrs. Dodge has proved an enigma to these great students of criminals. As she sits in the crowded courtroom, intent upon the proceedings, she is a study seldom presented in any courtroom. Her face is fine in its delicacy of exceptionally strong character. It is the type of a woman who would not scream if she saw a rat run across the floor, but at the same time her eyes are filled with tenderness.

At times she is the cool, calm woman of the world whom one might believe could stand any shock and never waver; again she is the soul of tenderness, a woman who would fill any home with sunshine.

Widow to Testify.

One of the most dramatic situations of the trial is expected when Mrs. Minnie Elliott Heath, the widow of William Heath, the Dalton, N. H., painter, who was shot down in the Dodge home, tells her story.

Mrs. Dodge told Mrs. Heath that she had been ironing in the kitchen when she heard several shots fired. She said she went through the sitting room into the bedchamber where Heath had been painting. Heath lay upon the floor. She turned him over and noticed blood trickling.

"I asked him what was the matter," Mrs. Dodge said to Mrs. Heath. "Mr. Heath did not reply. I asked him again and again.

"Still he did not get up. I ran to the cupboard in which I kept some brandy. I poured out two or three teaspoonfuls for him. But the brandy failed to arouse him.

"I was frightened. I ran to the telephone. I rang hard three or four times.

AMERICAN SHIPS TO AID MISSIONS

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Consul Bertholz at Canton, China, in a dispatch to the State department to-day urged that American warships be hurried to Canton immediately to protect American missionaries and American property in that city. This dispatch resulted in the matter being taken up at the cabinet meeting to-day and it is probable that a part if not all of the Asiatic fleet will be despatched to Canton. The gunboat Wilmington is in Chinese waters.

German and British warships are steaming up the Canton River at full speed to-day in the endeavor to rescue foreign missionaries, several of whom are said to have been killed in the uprising in Kwang Tung Province. All the missionaries and other foreigners are in imminent peril. Two French missionaries have been killed at Shih-Ting. Consular agents of the warships have been ordered to do everything in their power to persuade all foreigners to take refuge on the ships.

The British authorities here to-day have cabled London urgent appeals to have all available British warships rushed here to protect British lives and interests. Internationl complications are threatened from the attacks on foreigners and foreign interests and the apparent inability of the local troops to cope with the revolutionaries.

SECRET OATHS OF NIGHT RIDERS BARED

OWENSBORO, Ky., May 2.—The mysterious secrets of the night riders' oath are being bared in the suit for $30,000 damages brought by J. F. Van Hoosier against twenty Christian county tobacco growers which is in progress to-day. Taken from his home at midnight, a noose was placed about his neck and the rope thrown over a limb of a tree until it took the oath, according to Van Hoosier, he said upon the stand. He declares that the night riders finally freed him and his family from the border of the State.

10,000 UNION MEN STRIKE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 2.—Ten thousand men in various trades are on strike in Chicago to-day as a result of the May Day industrial ultimatums. Twenty thousand freight handlers and molders and metal trades workers are threatening to walk out. Those on strike now are railroad maintenance of way employes, 2,400; brick makers, 2,500; building trades, 5,000; machinists, 2,000 and electricians and machinery movers, 100.

In every instance except in the building trades the strikes were caused by the refusal of employers to grant increased wages and shorter hours.

GOVE CALLS GLOVER CASE INFAMOUS PLOT

Waltham Widow's Will Fight Near End—Arguments Completed This Afternoon.

Mrs. Clarence F. Glover, widow of the murdered Waltham laundryman, was scored to-day at the hearing of the will case before Judge Hammond of the Supreme Court and a jury in East Cambridge.

Jesse Glove, lawyer for the four brothers of Clarence Glover, who are seeking to break the will in which he left most of his $70,000 estate to the widow, said of Mrs. Glover:

"We ask for a verdict setting aside this will because we are entitled to it. We ask it not on sentiment, but on fact. We ask you to put the stamp of your disapproval upon this will because it is the will of Lillian Marie Glover, and not the will of Clarence Glover, because it was forced for infamous reasons and brought about by an infamous plot."

"None but a thoroughly vicious woman would use the language toward anybody, much less to her husband, that Mrs. Glover used to Clarence.

"What kind of a woman is it that would destroy a girl less than sixteen years old. It was infamous. A woman who would do a thing like that, what would she do with anybody she once had in her power?"

The case will be in the hands of the jury before night.

Fletcher Rainey argued in favor of upholding the will. All evidence in the case was in at 11:50 a. m. Mrs. Glover's own testimony under cross-examination and the introduction of a love letter written by Glover to his wife were the principal features of to-day's hearing of the case.

Widow in Tears.

Mrs. Glover listened to the reading of the letter with her eyes on the floor. There was a faint flush in her cheek. Glover referred to her as "my dear wife," "my little pet," and declared that "pa loves ma a whole big pile."

Referring to Hattie Le Blanc, Mrs. Glover said in her direct testimony:

Q—I looked after Hattie as if she were my own."

Cross-examined, Mrs. Glover said that she had taken Hattie Le Blanc to the theatre, notwithstanding a lack of evidence. When Mrs. Glover was asked about William Glover she said she had "no use for a man who almost starved his wife to death."

Lawyer Jesse Glove had a hard time in his cross-examination of Mrs. Glover. He tried time and time again to induce the witness to confine her replies to a mere "yes" and "no," but Mrs. Glover said she wanted to tell if all and she managed to do it pretty well in spite of the lawyer's protests.

At one time Mr. Glove asked a question about an incident back in 1905. Quick as a flash Mrs. Glover called his attention to the fact that the Judge had ruled that he could not go back more than a year and a half beyond the time of Mr. Glover's death in the case then being argued here. There was a smile at the brilliant lawyer's expense in the court roof.

Many Women in Court.

The court room was about half filled when the hearing was resumed before Judge Hammond to-day. Most of those present were women. Mrs. Glover talked for a few minutes with Mr. Rainey before court was opened. She was less pale than yesterday and appeared more cheerful. With the opening of court she was called at once to the witness stand.

Q.—Prior to the bath room incident did Hattie buy any of her own clothes. A.—She did not.

Q.—And you have already testified that she came to the Waltham home without any clothes to speak of? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did Hattie procure her clothing? A.—I made about all of Hattie's clothes. Some of them I bought.

Q.—Did you take Hattie to the theatre? A.—Yes, often.

Q.—And whether or not before the bath-room incident, you were kind and attentive to Hattie? A.—Yes, very much so. I looked after her as if she was my own.

RICH GIRL TO WED MAN SHE REFORMED

PHILADELPHIA, May 2. — Miss Edna W. Catlin of New York city, has told of her coming marriage to George Long, one of four slum missionaries who recently established a "haven" in Philadelphia's "Hell's Half Acre," one of the worst sections of the city. Miss Catlins has been a slum worker in New York city. During her work she met an apparent human derelict, who said he was George Long of Rochester, N. Y. She became interested in the apparent homeless man, who had sunk to the depths, and persuaded him to reform. Miss Catlins is said to be wealthy.

DON'T MISS "A SUCCESSFUL WIFE" GREAT SERIAL STORY BEGINS IN NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN BEST STORY EVER PRINTED IN NEW ENGLAND

SIGN PETITION FOR R. R. TODAY

No petition ever circulated in New England met with such instant favor and was indorsed so rapidly by the public as the AMERICAN'S Grand Trunk petition. But there are still several thousand signatures needed to make a round 100,000.

The AMERICAN asks its readers to continue to circulate their petitions and secure all the names they can. The AMERICAN wants this petition to contain 100,000 names and many thousands more if the Boston people wish, but not a single name less.

So everybody who believes that the Grand Trunk should come to Boston; all who think that the prosperity of the city depends upon the breaking of the present railroad monopoly, should work to complete the AMERICAN petition.

Directors Meet Today.

To-day the directors of the Grand Trunk Railroad in London will consider the invitation of Boston.

The English directors will be told that a city of 1,500,000, located only forty miles from the end of their lines, asks to be included in their railroad plans. They will receive copies of the resolutions passed by the Legislature of Massachusetts and the City Council of Boston and the official invitation issued by Mayor Fitzgerald on behalf of the City of Boston.

There can be but little doubt of their decision, in the meantime the petition is needed to clinch the good impression made by the resolutions.

100,000 Names Wanted.

There must be at least 100,000 names to it and as many more as possible.

The petition will be engrossed upon a great sheet of parchment and when signatures received will be pasted upon it, and it will be rolled in a wooden cylinder. When unrolled the petition will be close to a hundred feet long.

Those who sign will find their names alongside of governors, mayors, congressmen, great lawyers and business and moss college professors and other professional men. It will be indeed a roll of honor.

It will be taken to Ottawa by a committee acting for the AMERICAN and delivered into the hands of the officials of the Grand Trunk.

There is still time to get your name on this wonderful petition. Get aboard by signing the coupon printed in the AMERICAN or one of the petitions being circulated in your neighborhood.

STILSON HUTCHINS IS ADJUDGED INSANE

WASHINGTON, May 2.—A petition to have adjudged insane Stilson Hutchins, founder of the St. Louis Times, Washington Post, Washington Times and more prominently connected with the Des Moines, Ia., State Journal, Dubuque Herald and St. Louis Dispatch, has been granted, the writ being returnable May 4. The petition was filed by Mrs. Rose Keeling Hutchins, his second wife, a Baltimore woman, whom he married in 1900. By reason of his mental and physical condition, she says, Mr. Hutchins is incapable of properly caring for himself and his estate. It is said the estate is worth between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

VERMONT COLLEGE CALLS GUY BENTON

CINCINNATI, May 2.—The University of Vermont has asked President Guy Potter Benton of Miami University in Ohio to accept the presidency. Dr. Benton was prominently mentioned for president of the Boston University last Summer and only the fact that the trustees of Miami raised his salary and provided more courses at that university kept him at Oxford.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Bright lines letters will illuminate the story of May 1, 1911, for all bibliophiles, for it is believed to mark the greatest sale of books and manuscripts ever recorded. The two sessions, afternoon and morning, of the dispersal of the library of Robert Hoe in the Anderson Art Galleries, Madison avenue and Fortieth street, reached in all $285,163.50, of which sum $214,676.00 was received after sundown. This brings the total of the auctions to date to the stupendous figure of $748,254. As far as numbers are concerned the sale of the books on the first catalogue, which concludes this week, comprise only one-quarter of the entire collection.

First of all, the William Caxton edition of Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," the only perfect volume from the press of the first English printer known, reached the top price, $42,500, the buyer being Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan.

That beautiful illuminated manuscript, "The Book of Hours," containing prayers to be said at different periods of the day, which was illuminated for the Earl of Pembroke, held the attention of the onlookers from the first. This work of art was originally brought to this country by Cardinal Stanton Part. Who gave $12,000 for it.

It was disposed of in a sale of his manuscripts for $6,900 to Mr. Hoe, and last night for a slightly higher figure. Mr. Sloan declared that this inaccuracy does not matter as "an American can worship as devoutly before a gilt-edged book as he could if Osnaburg street were my first home in London, instead of my third."

Messrs. Quaritch of London, Baer of Frankfort, and Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia, Arthur Hoe, son of Colonel Hoe, bought it for $25,000. "The Hours of Jane le Beuf," a remarkable manuscript executed for the daughter of Charles VI. of France, was obtained by Miss Thirza Benson, granddaughter of the testator, for $24,000.

ABATEMAGGIO AGAIN REVILED

VITERBO, Italy, May 2.—Gennaro Abatemaggio, the betrayer of the Camorra, again assumed the principal role in the proceedings of the Camorrist trial to-day, and his attempt to make further revelations of the malign power of the Neapolitan society met with such a stormy reception from Enrico Alfano and his fellow-defendants that the session had to be suspended several times by President Bianchi while the carabineers restored order.

This was to be the concluding day in court and Crown's Counsel Cavalieri was to have introduced before the court oral and documentary evidence and exhibits to refute the denials of the alleged murders of Gennaro Cuocolo and Maria Cuocolo.

However, at the outset Abatemaggio asked permission of the court to make a statement. As the informer arose in his small steel cage and requested permission to speak his petition was the signal for a tumultuous outburst from the big cage containing Alfano, the reputed Camorrist head, and the other prisoners.

They bellowed at Abatemaggio, threatening and scoffing. With some difficulty the carabineers restored quiet and the betrayer addressed the court.

"I wish to make new revelations and said he. "I can tell of hitherto secret practices of the Camorra and will show its great power and its cunning artifices more clearly than anything I have told in the past."

Alfano and some of his fellows leaped to their feet, shaking their fists through the bars of their cage at Abatemaggio. Even Maria Stendardo, the only woman prisoner, joined her shrieks of protest with those of the men.

From what could be heard it was apparent that Abatemaggio was telling of incidents which he had witnessed since Alfano and the others were arrested. He told of secret communications smuggled from the jail and sent to Naples and of threats conveyed to witnesses for the prosecution. He declared that, during the imprisonment of the Camorrists in the monastery and penitentiary here connected by under surveillance, they were in communication with the outside world.

"Liar," screamed Professore Rapi, usually one of the most placid of the prisoners.

"It is not enough to have lied once that you must bear false testimony against us again," cried Giacomo Ascritore.

RISENTIMENTO DEI CAMORRISTI

VITERBO, Italia, 2 Maggio—Gennaro Abbatemaggio, il traditore della Camorra, ha anche oggi assunta la parte principale nella seduta di stamane del processo Cuocolo; ed avendo egli proposto di svelare maggiori incidenti della Camorra a Napoli, incidenti che varrorno sempre più a chiarire la maligna possanza di questa società a Napolitani, Enrico Alfano e gli altri compatriati, sollevarono tale un tumulto di imprecazioni e di proteste, che il presidente Cav. Bianchi fu costretto a sospendere il procedimento, mentre i carabinieri cercavano ristabilire l'ordine.

Ogni avvenimento della corte è confidato al Procuratore del Re avrebbe dovuto introdurre le testimonianze e le evidenze per confutare le negate degli accusati dell'assassinio del conte Cuocolo.

Intanto, appena salito in Corte, Abbatemaggio domandò permesso si rivolgere il fare una dichiarazione. Come questi si alzo' per parlare in sua gestura fu l'inizio di tumultuose proteste da parte degli imputati, proteste fatte di minaccie e di maledizioni. A stento i Carabinieri poterono ristabilire l'ordine per lasciare parlare all' Abbatemaggio.

"Io desidero fare nuove rivelazioni ed esporre a questa venerabile corte, infine mettere in luce meglio il potere della Camorra che mostrerano in Napoli. Ho ancora in mia grande possanza ed i suoi misteriosi artifizi; io posso mostrare tutto in modo migliore che non l' abbia fatto in passato."

A questa parole dell' Abbatemaggio, Enrico Alfano ed alcuni suoi compagni, levatisi in piedi, fecero sentire delle minacce e di proteste contro il teste, e Maria Maria Stendardo, l'unica donna prigioniera in questo processo, volle aggiungere la sua protesta e le sue bestemmie, a quelle degli uomini.

DELAWARE WINS ANOTHER TROPHY

The record-breaking battleship Delaware, in drydock at the Charlestown Navy Yard, has "21.9" painted in figures six feet long on both sides of the highest of its forward turrets, Captain Charles A. Gove, commanding the ship, and the officers and men are being congratulated on having broken another naval record and probably having won the engineering trophy of the fleet, which is now held by the battleship Nebraska.

The actual average made during the four hours' full-speed test Friday, off Rockland, Me., is 21.905 knots an hour. The ship's record for the full twenty-four-hour full-power run is an average of 21.02 knots an hour. On the first hour of the forward run for the four-hour test the ship drove along at a 22.5 knot rate, but did not maintain that phenomenal speed much longer than an hour, although it is stated that a higher speed could have been maintained if the oil fuel apparatus of the ship had been used.

PLYMOUTH "DRY" THROUGH MISTAKE

PLYMOUTH, May 2.—The ancient town where the Pilgrims landed is not only "dry" to-day, but polled by only one regularly appointed man. The Selectmen have appointed only Chief Rivell F. Smith, and it is rumored that at least part of the police force are to lose their jobs because of friction with the new head of the department. Plymouth is "dry" because no sixth class license can be issued upon until tomorrow owing to a mistake in the advertisements for licenses.

Viscountess Acheson Is Mother of Twins.

LONDON—It is learned that Viscountess Acheson, formerly Miss Mildred Carter, became the mother of twins and that one of them died. A boy survived, and as soon as Queen Alexandra heard of this she wrote to Lady Acheson expressing the wish to become the godmother of the surviving child. The date of the christening has been postponed, both to suit Her Majesty's convenience and because the child's health is extremely delicate. Lady Acheson has taken the little one to France in a sort of improvised incubator to accept the constant care of experts.

Shaw Hits Americans.

LONDON—George Bernard Shaw, in correcting alleged inaccuracies in his biography, written by Professor Henderson, says that the book is already attracting a stream of American pilgrims to a house in Osnaburgh street, in which he never lived. With his characteristic humor, Mr. Shaw declared that this inaccuracy does not matter as "an American can worship as devoutly before a gilt-edged book as he could if Osnaburgh street were my first home in London, instead of my third."

Peace Treaty Is in Sight.

LONDON—The Daily Telegraph and the Morning Leader, in apparently inspired articles, foreshadow the consummation of the peace treaty between England and the United States within a short time. The Leader contends editorially that it is more than idle to hope for a firm understanding between England and the United States while Germany continues to be one of alternate panic, and nuisance and insists on a better understanding with Germany.

Margherita Praises Our Art.

ROME—The Dowager Queen Margherita paid a visit yesterday to the American pavilion at the Fine Arts Exhibition. She was met and escorted around the pavilion by a party consisting of Harrison S. Morris, the American Commissioner to the exposition, his wife and daughter; the Count de San Martino, president of the International Art Exhibition, and his wife.

Woman Snake Expert Dead at 94

LONDON—Catherine Cooper Hopley, the oldest authority on snakes, who was arrested and held for several days on suspicion that she was a British spy during the Civil War in the United States, is dead. She was ninety-four years of age. When arrested she said she was only collecting material for a book on American birds.

Royal Medals for 36 Heroes.

LONDON—Royal recognition was given to-day to the bravery of thirty-six seamen coast guards. The life savers were called to Buckingham Palace and King George presented each with a medal. Then the King addressed them commending them for their heroism.

Art Dealer Left Millions.

LONDON—The great art collection left by Lieut. Gen. Wertheimer, who died on April 25, is to be sold. It is said that Wertheimer left trust funds amounting to more than $5,750,000.

SAMSON AND DELILAH OPENS OPERA SEASON

In a cablegram from Paris Henry Russell, managing director of the Boston Opera Company, announces he has decided to open the season of 1911-1912 with Camille Saint-Saens's "Samson et Delilah" on Monday evening, November 27. Giovanni Zenatello, the famous Italian tenor, will sing Samson, and the Spanish contralto, Maria Gay, will sing Delilah. Mr. Russell will provide for "Samson et Delilah" a scenic production which has never been surpassed on the lyric stage, plans for which have just been completed by Delfino Menotti, the regisseur general, and Pedro Stroppa, the scenic artist.

BE PROMPT ON CONTEST ORDERS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Be prompt now with your Contest orders.

The Contest Editor has given all candidates in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest an Opportunity Week, in which they were offered double count on all subscriptions.

Now the Contest Editor asks that all candidates and subscribers do their parts by keeping the machinery oiled.

That is, allow no delay in taking all newsdealers' orders and returning post cards to the newsdealers.

Thousands of orders are going out to subscribers in response to the thousands of subscriptions turned in during Opportunity Week. Subscribers will get these orders next week. Take the orders and the return postcards to the newsdealers at once.

The handling of this contest has been hindered time and again by subscribers holding their orders and return postcards or by delay in getting them to their newsdealers. It is absolutely essential, at this busy time, that the unnecessary confusion be reduced to the smallest possible percentage just now.

Let every subscriber, on receipt of his newsdealer's order and return postcard, hurry them to his newsdealer. Leave the order with the newsdealer. Have the return postcard properly filled out by him. Then have it mailed back to the Contest Department immediately. Mail it yourself and save time.

The quicker this is done, the quicker the Sunday AMERICAN will be started to the subscriber.

Candidates should see their subscribers and impress the importance of doing this upon them. It is vital to the candidate. These Opportunity Week subscriptions mean double vote credit. But, if the return postcard is lost or delayed and does not get back to the Contest Department, the candidate loses the vote credit. In the case of Opportunity Week subscriptions, it means loss of the big double vote credit.

The Contest Editor is emphatic about this. It MUST be done. There is no need of any more loss or misplacement of orders and return post cards. This contest is getting too near its close now to be hindered by any such careless work.

LIVE CONTEST CANDIDATE IN MANCHESTER

MICHAEL J. HASNEY

Manchester, N. H., has many active candidates. Among them is Michael J. Hasney, one of the District Five hustlers. Mr. Hasney is out to win and says that the next list of candidates' standing will show how he has progressed.

That next list comes MAY 16. It will contain vote totals, don't forget that.

RAIN CHECKS FOREST FIRE.

SANDWICH, May 2.—The forest fire, which burned over 2,000 acres of timber and brush land, has been extinguished by rain. The only buildings destroyed by the fire were those on the Cobb and Minot sheep farm in Forestdale.

LABOR LEADER IS FINED $200

John R. Oldham, organizer for the United Shoe Workers of America, was fined $200 to-day for contempt of court by Judge Pierce in the Superior Court for violating an injunction in the case of the F. Brigham & Gregory Company of Hudson, in whose plant a strike is on. Oldham was restrained from interfering with new employes and Judge Pierce to-day said that he found that Oldham had in two instances induced men to quit work by paying them money since he was enjoined.

Judge Pierce said: "I am very sorry for the result, not so much because I had to find Oldham guilty, but because of his action after this court had tried to look at the case from their standpoint. I said the labor unions have often declared that they did not get fair treatment in the courts. I do not think that is a just charge.

"I tried to look at this case from their standpoint as far as I could, and I regret that notwithstanding my action he had seen fit to violate the decree of this court. This action will make it more difficult in the future for this court, or any other court, to look at things from their point of view."

Judge Pierce also made permanent the injunction against Locals No. 28 and No. 40 of Hudson, United Shoe Workers of America.

"Knob Joint"

Simple Treatment Quickly Relieves this and all Foot Troubles

"Knob-Joint" is an extremely prominent bunion and like all bunions, becomes intensely painful at times. Sufferers from bunions or any kind of sore feet will be glad to know of the following treatment that brings relief almost like magic, and if adhered to for a short time, it gives a complete cure. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water; soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, massaging the sore parts gently. (Less time will not give desired results.) Repeat each night until cure is permanent. The redness goes instantly and the feet feel simply delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Inflammation or pustular sweaty feet is quickly relieved. Calocide is the new scientific foot preparation. It can be bought from any druggist. If not in stock he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Its twenty-five cent package is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet.

WHITE DIVORCE SUIT IS BEGUN

Archibald S. White of New York and Cincinnati, the multi-millionaire gas and electric promoter, has filed an action for divorce from his wife, formerly Olive Celeste Moore, the prima donna who made her debut on the light opera stage with "The Bostonians" in this city in 1902.

Boston opera patrons have followed with interest the career of Mrs. White. A year ago she received an offer of an engagement from Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company. She is said to hold that offer still under consideration. It is possible that Bostonians will hear her sing again in this city, as Mrs. White is determined to resume her stage career, which is one of the causes of difference between her and Mr. White.

Husband Brings Suit.

Dispatches to-day from Cincinnati say that Mr. White filed his suit when he found that his wife had taken no steps toward a divorce herself. He charges neglect and absence. It is expected that Mrs. White will not oppose the suit, and that Mr. White will make a financial arrangement if the divorce is granted.

Mrs. Olive Celeste Moore White is the daughter of Judge Elwyn T. Moore of Red Cloud, Minn. She came to Boston in 1902 and joined "The Bostonians." She scored a personal triumph in the role of Alan-a-Dale in "Robin Hood." She was equally successful in "The Red Feather."

"Beauty of Woodlea."

In 1904 Archibald S. White met the beautiful singer. He was then a widower with one child. He married Miss Moore in 1905 at her father's home in Minnesota. The Whites settled in New York. The husband bought "Woodlea," the luxurious estate of Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson, for the bride. He gave her a $100,000 pearl necklace.

Mrs. White, who became known as the "Woodlea Beauty," went abroad in February, 1910, for further cultivation of her magnificent voice. She rented the Paris residence of Michael Euphrussi, No. 21 Avenue Dufois. She entertained lavishly and became a favorite in the so-called Bohemian and operatic set. In Paris she became known as "The Little Cavalieri," from her resemblance to the diva.

Easy Way to Improve Your Health

(From Current News)

Sickness and ill health almost invariably come from impurities in the blood which, at the approach of warm weather cause spring fever, loss of energy and vitality, sallowness, pimples, poor appetites and other evidences of a deranged system.

At small expense these disorders can easily be corrected by taking a good, reliable tonic, for the restoration of energy and good health, and positive relief from spring ailments, no better remedy can be found than this valuable tonic: Get an ounce of hardens and one-half pint alcohol at any drug store and mix with one-half cup sugar. When dissolved add hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and in a short time you will be surprised at the splendid health-restoring qualities of this old-fashioned remedy. It is the best system-cleansing, blood-purifying tonic known.

QUINCY CALLS GRAND TRUNK

The citizens of Quincy are enthusiastic over the idea of having the Grand Trunk railroad come to Boston. The City Council last evening passed a resolution inviting the Grand Trunk to make Boston its Eastern terminal. The resolution was introduced by Councilman R. S. Ross and passed unanimously.

The resolution as it was adopted by the Council is:

"Be it resolved that:

"Whereas the entry of the Grand Trunk Railroad into Boston would stimulate the commerce and development of the United States and Canada, and

"Whereas any movement that would serve to reawaken Boston commercially would benefit the commerce of Quincy, as the commercial interest of the two cities are identical.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the City Council of Quincy, herewith join in urging the Grand Trunk Railroad system to make Boston its Eastern terminal and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the directors of the Grand Trunk Railroad."

W. M. MALLOY DEAD.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Suddenly stricken with heart failure, after an attack of acute gastritis, William Martin Malloy, private secretary of United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois, died in the arms of his roommate, Mr. Malloy was decorated by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland for services rendered at the peace conference at The Hague, he serving as secretary.

HOPE FOR 1912 HOLDS SENATORS

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Up to this day of the extra session, the Senate's achievements have consisted chiefly in an extraordinary capacity for adjournment.

In this particular that august body's occasional vigor in coming together has been more than equalled by its prompt activity in getting away.

The scene shifts, and with the house pounding its way through long daily sessions upon the tariff, the centre of national interest is in the Senate where the clerk's desk is piled high with the vital house measures, the direct election, conservation, publicity and Canadian reciprocity and a farmer's free list bill already knocking at its doors.

What will the Senate do with these? That's the question of the congressional hour.

To begin with, Borah of Idaho, vigilant of opportunity, caught the direct elections bill hot from the hands of the judiciary committee and reported it on the Senate. Heyburn of Idaho whose senatorial title is one long objection and whose exercise is had in wrangling technicalities, objected to Borah's report on a purely technical point which at best can but delay the matter for a day. What good the delay will do Heyburn or the opposition, it is impossible to discover. Nobody but Heyburn would have made the point.

Bill Will Finally Pass.

The bill will surely pass the Senate when it can be brought to a vote, and, of course, it can be brought to a vote.

Reciprocity will pass the Senate, too, not particularly close. Senator Jones has made a good speech in its favor, but because the growing sentiment in the Senate city in its favor is impressing itself upon the doubtful or dissenting senators.

The President's speech at the publishers' banquet has had a great effect, and his active personal appeals to his party Senators in its behalf have had an even more practical effect.

Underwood of the House feels confident the bill will pass the Senate. Both reciprocity and the farmers' free list bring the tariff down to the free list basis, and it is the question that splits both parties. The Western insurgent Republicans cut their eye teeth upon a downward revision of the tariff against the blistering protests of their party, and the lumber, sugar and iron Democrats of the South are not the first party break since the war upon the tariff that protects their local interests.

Will Stick to Party.

Both these groups lark the courage to cut loose from party lines and align themselves with conviction regardless of parties or their issue.

So that party loyalty will play a large part in the final decision. The Democrats will probably not be this.

For the Democrats have the vital prospect of success to unite their forces around the progressive, which is also the popular side of the question. Facing the presidential election with roseate hope and a big program of a Democratic House to show well, the Democratic leaders will hesitate long before they imperil their splendid chance of victory by division and by more local prospects.

I happen to know that a tremendous pressure from home constituencies and from party leaders is now on the Democrats in this connection. The ultra conservatives in the Democratic party and conservative Democrats in the Senate are in reality a more Bailey party than the democratic party, and it is the party appeal in the Democratic organization that will be effective with many, if not all, of their men.

To Solidify Senate Democrats.

Tariff reform is a Democratic principle which was won't in the abstract. We approach mighty close to the free trade line, and it is urged that this new principles of revision or reform is as "conservative as any stalwart Democrat of the old school has a right to demand."

Along this line it is hoped to solidify the Senate Democrats upon a broad and unpolitic policy of tariff reduction, which will rally the conservatives to fall in with the House Democrats upon both reciprocity and the farmers' free list.

It is difficult to see how the agricultural South and the even more agricultural West can fail to demand of their representatives in Congress a full, hearty support of these remarkable Democratic specialist and also of the reciprocity bill, of which it is the corollary.

The Farmers' Union, 2,500,000 strong in the West and South, has called a conference of its State presidents in executive council to consider the initiative of body will almost surely send out a ringing endorsement of the farmers' free list and of reciprocity.

And then, with the voices of 2,500,000 farmers ringing in their ears, the congratulations must, indeed, be compelling which would turn a deaf ear—concretely or a negative senatorial vote to this materials and powerful appeal.

Urges Reopening Lorimer Case.

Lafollette is indeed earnest over the reopening of the Lorimer case. He called up the bill before he finished with the beginning of the present session and asked that it be referred to the committee on contingent expenses. The Lafollette bill named as the Lorimer new investigating committee five senators who were not members when the case was tried at the last session.

The committee on contingent expenses are five senators, two of whom voted for Lorimer last session, two who voted against him, the other is Senator Williams, who has just finished a term.

So the fate of the Lorimer resolution will rest with John Sharp Williams of Mississippi.

What will John Sharp Williams do with it?

ATTORNEYS IN THE GLOVER WILL CASE BEGIN THEIR ARGUMENTS

MANY WITNESSES TESTIFY TO THE HOME LIFE OF THE GLOVERS.

Q—Did you ever say to Hattie that you had Seymour put into the will? A—I never did.

Q—Did you ever talk with Hattie about the will? A—Never.

Q—When did you return from Jamaica with your husband? A—It was in the very late winter of 1906.

Q—And in the Spring of 1906 did Mr. Glover and his brother Seymour go on a fishing trip to Maine? A—They did.

Q—And they were gone for several weeks? A—They were.

Q—Did Mr. Glover write son while he was away calling? A—He did, regularly.

Q—I wish that you would look at this letter, Mrs. Glover, look it through and say whether or not it was a letter written to you by Mr. Glover from his fishing camp in Maine? A—It is.

The letter was handed to Mr. Glove. He stated that he had no objections to it being read. The letter was then read by Mr. Rainey:

Dear Wife:

I had a fine time here. I never saw such fish. I wish my dear wife had some of the trout; they are so nice. As the old lady leaves for Arichat today I suppose my little girl will be alone. I have not received a letter from my little girl since I have been here. When I first arrived I asked them if there was a letter from my wife. They told me I have always looked for a letter from you when I was away, but I guess Mac is paying Fa in his own coin. Fa loves Ma a whole lot.

With much love in closing and much affection to you I remain your affectional, loving husband.

This ended the direct examination of Mrs. Glover. Mr. Gove then started with the cross-examination.

Q—You received this letter while your husband was on a fishing trip? A—Yes.

Q—In the Spring of 1908? A—1907.

Q—When were you at Arichat before 1906? A—1907.

Q—You were not there in 1909? A—No, sir.

Q—Have you been there since? A—No.

Q—When did your mother die? A—I cannot say.

Q—Five years ago? A—It might have been.

Q—Eight years ago? A—I do not think so.

Q—More than three years ago? A—It might have been.

Q—Hy. Judge Hammond)—Well, approximately when. Can't you say? A—I cannot say it is not about four years ago.

Q—Did you go to Arichat at that time? A—No, sir.

Q—Had your mother been to the States in the last few years of her life? A—No, sir.

Q—When Hattie Le Blanc came to your house in October, 1908, you had no other servant? A—No, sir.

Q—She was there constantly? A—Yes.

Q—You were there all of the time? A—Most of the time.

Hattie at the Ball Game.

Q—Was Hattie ever away from the house? A—Yes, sir. From March 30 to April 7. The year that Mr. Glover died she was away.

Q—And after April 7, she was there until the death? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Was her position the same? A—I had understood what you mean by position.

Q—Her work? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You took her to the theatre? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Automobiling? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did Hattie go to ball games with you and Mr. Glover? A—Once in a while.

Q—One of those games that Hattie attended was during the afternoon of the day when Mr. Glover died? A—Yes, sir.

Q—From April 7 until your husband's death had you noticed any difference in the treatment of your husband toward Hattie? A—No.

Q—Had you noticed any difference in Hattie's treatment of your husband? A—No.

Q—Were you away at all from April 7 up to the time of your husband's death? A—Yes, I was.

Q—Where did you go? A—I went fishing with Mr Glover. We went to New Hampshire and among the Thousand Islands.

Q—How long were you gone in the Thousand Islands? A—Five weeks.

"Old Lady" a Trunk.

Q—How many times did Hattie go? A—Only once. We did not take Hattie everywhere.

Q—On April 7, when Hattie came back to the house, was Mr. Glover there? A—Mr. Glover was in Waltham.

Q—He was in the house that night? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did you stay in the house from then until April 17? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did Mr. Glover go away then? A—No, sir.

Q—Was he about the house as usual? A—Yes.

Q—Was there talk in Hattie's presence between you and Mr. Glover about business affairs? A—None whatever.

Q—Did you ever have any talk with Mr. Glover in the presence of Hattie about your business affairs? A—I do not remember.

Q—Did you have any disputes with Mr. Glover about the will? A—No, sir.

Q—You and William Glover haven't been on friendly terms for years, have you? A—Mrs. Glover caused the trouble between her and them, looking straight at Mr. Gove, she said. I have told time and time again about William Glover. Mr relations were not friendly with him.

Q—You haven't been on friendly terms with Norman Glover, had you? A—I didn't see him for twenty-two years, and I didn't want to.

Q—And you haven't been on friendly terms with Arthur, have you? A—For sixteen years I didn't see him.

Q—Why don't you just answer my questions as I put them. A—Well I think you ought to understand how little I think of a man, a brother-in-law, if I haven't seen him in sixteen years.

Q—Well I try to do it in a proper way, don't volunteer so much, and just confine yourself and answer my questions. You furnished money, either you or your husband, to Arthur? A—Well, it was my money although my husband gave it to him. Arthur did not ask for $200.

Again Parries With Lawyer.

Q—There you go again. I didn't ask you whether or not Arthur did you out of anything. Will you please answer my question and answer the questions alone. A—Well, I loaned Arthur $1,000. I don't think we would have got any of it back except for a Mr. D'Arcy. He paid us $700. Arthur never paid what he ever got.

Q—Now, you say outside of the time when you fell out over the dog and the bathroom incident that your home life was perfectly happy and contented? A—Well, we had those little spats that any man and his wife will have.

Q—And you say you never heard of the will? A—No, never heard of it.

Q—And Mr. Glover never talked to you about it? A—No, he never did.

Q—And you never talked with anyone about it? A—No.

Q—Was there talk in Hattie's presence between you and Mr. Glover about business affairs? A—None whatever.

Q—Did you ever have any talk with Mr. Glover in the presence of Hattie about your business affairs? A—I do not remember.

Q—And Mr. Glover never talked to you about it? A—No, he never did.

Q—And you never talked with anyone about it? A—No.

Q—Harold Gardner was a frequent visitor at your home, wasn't he? A—Why, he was only a laundry driver not came to the house for the laundry. I left it on the stairs for him every Monday morning.

Q—Wasn't Harold Gardner up to your house often previous to 1906? A—In fact, he was at the time that Arthur ruled that we are not to go more than a year and a half back of the time of Mr. Glover's death and I figure that 1906 is way back of that limit.

"You can't inquire as far back as 1906," said Judge Hammond, addressing Mr. Gove.

Q—Well, we'll put it this way. You knew Harold Gardner well prior to 1908? A—Not very well.

Q—You knew him well enough to talk to him about the bathroom incident, didn't you? A—That was not prior to 1908. I did not talk with him about the bathroom affair until two weeks after the murder.

Q—Did you talk with Hattie about the bathroom incident after she returned to your house on April 7? A—I certainly did.

Q—What did you tell her? A—I told her that if she was going to stay in this house she must be a good girl and I let her understand that in no uncertain terms. He promised me that she would.

Q—Do you know that your husband met Arthur once on the restaurant on South Market street? A—He might have. I don't know. I don't know everybody he met when he came into Boston.

Widow Is Excused.

Q—You understood, however, that on one of the trips to Boston your husband met Arthur? A—I heard it stated so.

Q—Can you tell us when this was that he met Arthur? A—No, I don't know myself.

This concluded Mrs. Glover's cross-examination. Arthur Glover was then called for cross-examination, but he was not there. Word was received that he would be there at 11:30. Four witnesses were then sworn for the day.

Mrs. Seymour Glover was the next witness. She testified that Clarence always used to spend his holidays at her house and his birthdays, but that none of the other brothers ever came there. She was then asked:

Q—Is Mrs. Eva Walker your daughter and the daughter of Seymour Glover? A—She is Seymour Glover is her father.

Q—Did you ever hear Clarence charge that Seymour was not her father? A—I never did.

Johnson a Witness.

Q—Albert visited your house much after the death of Mr. Glover, did he not? A—He did.

Q—What did Albert say with reference to the will of Clarence? A—He said that all the brothers needed to do was to get Mrs. Glover behind his arm in order to break the will.

A recess was taken at this point.

Melvin M. Johnson, counsel for Hattie Le Blanc at her trial for the murder of Clarence Glover, was called as a witness when court resumed. Mr. Johnson gave his name and testified that he was a lawyer. He was then asked:

Q—Do you know Mrs. Carrie M. Parker, the bookkeeper at the Waltham Laundry? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did you have a talk with Mrs. Parker with reference to Mr. Glover since his death? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Where was that conversation? A—At No. 45 Pond street, Waltham.

Q—When was that? A—Some evening in the Fall of last year. I don't recall just the date nor the month.

Q—What was that talk about? A—I asked her certain questions about a conversation she had with Mr. Glover.

Q—Was it about the will? A—Yes.

No Interest in Will.

Q—What did you ask her? A—I asked her if she had had a talk with Glover about it.

Q—What did she say? A.—She said no.

Q—Did you ask her any other questions? A—I only asked her about the circumstances of his making a will or something about a will.

Mr. Rainey cross-examined.

Q—You were only looking into the criminal end of the case? A.—Yes, sir.

Q—You had no interest in the will. A—No.

Q—You went to St. John? A.—Yes, sir.

Q—Do you know Larry Smith? A.—Yes, sir.

Q—Do you know whether he went to St. John or not? A—Yes, he did go.

Q—Do you know who gave him the money to go? A—No, sir.

Q—You did not give him the money? A—No.

Q—Did Mr. Brewer go to West Arichat? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Have you seen Larry Smith recently? A—I saw him last Wednesday.

Q—Did you ever tell Attorney Elmore that Hattie Le Blanc knew nothing about the will of Clarence F. Glover? A—No, sir.

Q—Nothing like that? A.—Nothing like that or that in substance.

Glover Death Tale.

Matthew McKenna, a Waltham machinist, testified that he found Mr. Glover the night of his death and helped him up the steps of the hospital. He said he stayed with Glover until ten minutes before he died and everything was all right. He denied that either Dr. Dowd or any other doctor had handed the matter of a will to Glover and that Glover never said that he had made a will and that everything was all right.

Under cross-examination McKenna said that Glover, referring to his business matters, said that everything was all right but there was positively no reference to a will.

Arthur Glover was then recalled for cross-examination. He corrected his testimony given at the probate court when he said the $1,300 loaned to Mrs. Larry Smith was loaned at the suggestion.

To-day he said that it was not done under those conditions. He declared that the money had not been paid back and so far as his own financial transactions with Clarence Glover were concerned as the time of his brother's death, he owed him nothing.

The contestants of the will rested their case at 11:50 o'clock. Counsel conferred with Judge Hammond and the arguments were started.

Lawyer Opens Argument.

It was decided to give each lawyer one hour for argument. Attorney Gove began at once. He said:

"Of all the troubles that come before our courts the most disagreeable for all parties concerned are troubles of the family, skeletons come into view and that is what we are looking at in this case. The question is whether this will that we are considering is the will of Clarence F. Glover. Or is it the will such as he would not have made unless forced by someone else? The contestants say he was forced to make this will against his will and contrary to his desire by his wife, Lillian Marie Glover. The evidence shows that from May 9 in 1908 until his death at the hands of a burglar Clarence Glover was a frequent visitor to the restaurant of his brother Arthur in Roxbury, that there he met two other brothers, William and Norman, that they had many chats over old times, talked as brothers would talk, enjoyed their meals together, agreeably and happy. They also told them of his wasted life and the disagreeable situation, the "hell" he was living in.

"He opened his heart to his brothers. We have shown you how he went over to Arthur's house and kissed the sleeping children. His home wasn't the home he wanted. He found solace and joy in the home of his brother Arthur upon his visits there and he unburdened himself to both Arthur and his wife.

The Temptation Removed.

"Early in April, in 1909, he met Arthur and his wife on Tremont street and he told them he had to do something that he didn't want to do. It was preying upon his mind, he said. This was just after the bathroom incident. After Mrs. Glover's visit to her lawyer and two weeks before the will that we have here was executed and delivered.

Mr. Gardner says that Mrs. Glover spoke to him the next day after the bathroom incident and told him what occurred. 'Was Hattie there?' she said to me. He says she said she sent her away that day. She was a gentle lover and he gave her the best advice that a man can give a woman. Remove the temptation. And the temptation was removed for a week. We know that on April 7 Hattie came back again. She remained there. Now, do you suppose that a man in his condition as a result of the bathroom incident that it had gone on for two weeks after the child's arrival and during the time of the illness and death. And she brought the child back on April 7.

Sarcasm is Rebuked.

"What kind of a woman is it that would do such a thing as that—Fully a girl less than eight years of age to be re-open the opportunity for a continuance of it? It was infamous. Think of what a horrible thing it is that any man would do a thing like that, what would she do after he was dead? Why, the lover's dead. She talked of divorce. But what did she do? She brought the child back again that the same thing could occur. You saw her on the stand. The contrast of her answers was the biting and cutting kind of such a woman would use. You can wonder that Clarence said to his brothers: 'You can't come to my house. You don't fit.' Would anybody want her to come to their house, to their family after they had seen her on the stand?

"Is there any evidence to show that Clarence Glover intended to do different than he did do as regards the will? He said he had to do what he didn't want to do. He said he wished he could do different. He said he did not do the things he ought to do for his brothers.

"Everything about this case shows that the situation of Clarence Glover in his home was something depressing and something he could not stand.

"None but a thoroughly vicious woman would use the language toward anybody much less to her husband, that Mrs. Glover used to Clarence. You have Hattie Le Blanc's deposition.

A Strong-Minded Woman.

"Could you conceive any more abominable language than that used in Clarence Glover's home. Hattie has no interest in this will. It is nothing to her. She heard Mrs. Glover say to Clarence 'You will go to Seymour in the will.' Mrs. Glover insisted and it was done. Any doubt about it? And is there any doubt about its being different from what Clarence Glover wanted?

"The will was signed and this strong-minded woman, Lillian Marie Glover, dictated every line of it. Glover lived only five months after that. He died on November 20. Miss Shaw, the nurse, says that Glover, in response to a question of Dr. Dowd, said that his will was all right. McKenna says the word will was never mentioned. Dr. Dowd was sent up to New Hampshire to bring Miss Shaw here. If Dr. Dowd did ask Glover about a will and Glover said he had made one and that it was all right, don't you think the other side would have Dr. Dowd here to testify to that? He's only a few miles away in Waltham and Miss Shaw travelled a hundred miles.

"We ask for a verdict setting aside this will because we are entitled to it. We ask it, not on sentiment, but on fact. We ask you to put the stamp of your disapproval upon this will because it is the will of Lillian Marie Glover and not the will of Clarence Glover; because it was forced for infamous reasons and brought about by an infamous plot."

Fire! Fire! Fire!

F. Gray Co., the Clothiers, Will Give an Exhibition of the Davy Safety Fire Escape Device.

While the New York fire horror is still fresh in the minds of the people, in the very midst of the reports from the smouldering ruins of Bangor and while a wave of fire escape agitation is sweeping the nation, the F. Gray Clothing Company have arranged a public demonstration of the most recently invented and simple method of fire escape.

On next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock a man will leap from the top or fifth story of the F. Gray Company's big building, at the corner of Washington and Hanover streets, and will descend rapidly, but in perfect safety, to the pavement below, to be immediately followed in the same manner by a young woman.

From purely humane motives the F. Gray Company have arranged to have this demonstration take place from their building in full view of the crowded thoroughfares which meet at the square formed by the junction of Hanover, Washington and Friend streets, and earnestly invite all who can to be present in the streets and witness for themselves the safe descents of the man and young woman who will make the leap.

Stirred by the awesome details of the recent New York factory fire and eager to be prompt in granting the great mass of working people with whom they are constantly associated in a business way, the F. Gray Company, who do not sell these fire escapes and are in no way connected with the manufacturers of this remarkable device for saving life, have secured from the city officials the necessary permits to conduct the public exhibition.

Factory girls, flat dwellers, mothers, home and daughters are employed in tall buildings or structures equipped with ancient and useless means of fire escape, owners of such buildings, real estate agents, insurance men, all are publicly invited to be on hand Thursday afternoon by the F. Gray Company.

The demonstration will take place from the fifth story window on the Hanover street side, and the new Davy Automatic Safety Fire Escape will be the device used. This simple invention is a round steel bar weighing but a few pounds, which is attached securely to the window jamb inside the building, and to which is attached a life belt and a coil of rope. The whole is absolutely fire proof and the user merely seizes the spool about which the rope is coiled, throws it out of the window, slips the life belt, which is left hanging from the box, under his or her arms and jumps out. The descent is made with ease and comfort, an automatic brake, rust proof and guaranteed to last a life time, controlling the velocity of the descent.

When the first trip is made a life belt on the end will be first thrown out, returns automatically to the window where another trip can be made, and another and still another without end, the first trip even from a fifteen-story building requiring for the whole operation but thirty seconds, and much less for a building not so high. The succeeding trips require even less time.

Lieutenant Charles F. Howell of the United States Revenue Service will make the first descent Thursday afternoon, to be followed by a young woman who will never see the device until at the moment she is about to make the descent.

S. L. SHERMAN PLEADS GUILTY

Smith L. Sherman of Fitchburg retracted his plea of not guilty when the Grand Jury reported in the United States District Court to Judge Dodge to-day, and pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with using the mail with intent to defraud, by attempting to get possession of the estate of Dr. Sarah Jane Williams of Boson, valued at $50,000, by representing himself as the sole heir-at-law. Sentence was deferred for two weeks because his wife is ill.

Dr. Williams, a supposed pauper, died in Boston worth $44,000. Mr. Sherman claimed the estate as a cousin, introducing various letters to support his contention. The Federal authorities pronounced the letters forgeries. The case is said to revert to the Commonwealth unless Mount Holyoke College could establish rights they claimed. Smith was arrested in June and held in $1,000, but as he had an invalid wife who needed his care he was paroled in the custody of his counsel. The letters introduced by Sherman refer to him as "Dear Cousin" and speak of loans of money she desired to make.

Attorney Wood Guilty.

Attorney Howell T. Wood retracted his former plea and changed it to guilty to an indictment charging him with using the mails with intent to defraud by pretending to Southern cotton companies that he had unusual equipment for the disposal of bond issues. He will be sentenced on May 25.

Arthur E. Feeley pleaded guilty to embezzlement of $2,800 from the Third National Bank of Pittsfield, where he was a clerk. His attorney is in England and sentence was deferred.

Charles H. Gifford of Attleboro, manufacturer of jewelry novelties, retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded to an indictment charging him with concealing assets in bankruptcy. He will be sentenced on May 16.

Thomas Smith, who has already spent three months in the Cambridge jail, was sentenced to nine months in the jail at East Cambridge for breaking and entering the North Billerica postoffice. When Judge Dodge sentenced him, Smith thanked the court for not giving him a longer sentence as had been asked for by the assistant district attorney.

Well Case Postponed.

Miss Edith P. Carpenter, formerly assistant postmaster at Walpole, who some time ago pleaded guilty to embezzlement of $300 from the postoffice, had her case placed on file, the court learning that restitution had been made.

Harry Cranalis of Cambridge was fined $50 for depositing in the mail matter that was unmailable.

The case of Victor M. Well, the stock broker charged with using the mails to defraud, was put over indefinitely on account of the illness of the United States Assistant District Attorney French.

MRS. THURSTON FILES RENO SUIT

Mrs. Mary E. Thurston, niece of Edward H. Harriman, the late railroad magnate, has filed suit for divorce against her husband, Charles Story Thurston, a young lawyer, formerly of Boston, according to despatches from Reno. Mrs. Thurston has been in Reno for many months, and her husband is said to be spring in a sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., of an illness resulting from typhoid fever with which he was afflicted four years ago.

TO ARREST GIRL IN LYNN CASE

Determined that efforts to trace her daughter, Lottie, fifteen years old, who she claims was lured away from her home to prevent her testifying in a criminal case against two well-known Lynn men, shall not cease, Mrs. Mary Logan of No. 449 Fisher street, that city, to-day swore out a warrant for the girl's arrest, so that the police may legally take her when found.

The girl's description is being sent to police in other cities and towns, and they expect to have her in custody soon.

The girl's evidence is wanted in the criminal proceedings her mother proposes to bring against a leading Lynn business man and a prominent physician, also of that city. It was to prevent Lottie from testifying that the mother declares the girl was induced to leave her home and accompany two men who drove in an automobile up to her home during her mother's absence.

The names of the men said by Mrs. Logan to have been concerned in the case are on every one's lips in Lynn and surprise is expressed that the police have not been more active in the matter.

Mrs. Logan is certain that the men she accuses have held out some powerful inducements or else threats to make her daughter go away from her home as she did. She is not certain that the girl was kidnaped and can hardly bring herself to believe the story told her that Lottie ran from the house and voluntarily entered the automobile.

Mrs. Logan asserts that her daughter when recovering at a hospital from the effects of an operation performed by the physician under suspicion promised her that she would freely testify against the merchant, whom she declared had induced her to drink drugged cocktails, and against the physician. It was the day after this conversation that Lottie disappeared. The mother now believes that during the testimony of the young girl, the men implicated in the case arranged to have her taken from Lynn and that she either is in New York or on her way to the West, where she will be kept until the case is forgotten.

STRUCK BY AUTO; PUMMELS CHAUFFEUR

PROVIDENCE, May 2.—After being knocked down and rolled in the mud for five yards by an automobile, John Hamilton jumped into a car driven by John Olsen in Clarkstone avenue and pummeled him until he was tired and spectators pulled him away. Hamilton had been standing waiting a car with two young women, when the car came along and knocked him under the wheels. Those looking on feared he had been killed, but he appeared right side up and very much alive.

IDLE MAN SLASHES THROAT, BUT LIVES

LOWELL, May 2.—Michael Doyle, forty-five, slashed his throat to-day with a razor at his lodgings, No. 304 Lawrence street. He was taken to St. John's Hospital, where his wound was stitched. He will recover. Up to three weeks ago Doyle was employed in the Sterling mills, when he was laid off.

FISHERMAN SAVED WHEN BOAT UPSETS

PLYMOUTH, May 2.—Rounding Gurnet Light for Plymouth, Captain Mills of the steam yacht Aurania from New Bedford, saw a fisherman clinging to a capsized sailing dory and signalling for help. A boat was put over the side and Captain Mills, Mate Burns and Thomas Aykroid picked the man up after he had slipped off, exhausted, and had sunk twice.

Handsome Gowns and Dresses

On Sale Wednesday and Thursday, Comprising Our Share of the Entire Stock of the Fashion Manufacturing Co.,

At 27, 29, 31 and 33 West 20th Street, New York City

Thirty-five years ago the Fashion Manufacturing Co. was organized in New York. After a successful business career, extending over a period of more than a third of a century, the members of this celebrated concern determined to retire. They could have sold their name and good will for thousands of dollars, but after 35 years this concern was naturally very proud of its reputation and preferred to terminate the business rather than entrust the name to some one who might not adhere to the principles laid down by the founders.

The Entire Stock of More Than 3000 Distinguished Gowns and Dresses Was Purchased by the Siegel Chain of Stores Through Their United Purchasing Power

There were dresses in this purchase made by the Fashion Manufacturing Co. to be sold for $25, $30, $35, $40 and $50—Yet all were included in this great transaction.

You can picture in your mind the kind of Dresses and Gowns you are going to get when you consider the fact that you are buying garments possessing that unusual style and quality that for 35 years made the Fashion Mfg. Co. leaders among the Dress Manufacturers of the Country—Dresses made by a concern with an established reputation of 35 years.

We call your attention to the indescribable styles, the wonderful trimmings, the extraordinary quality of the materials, the especially fine fitting qualities and graceful contour of every gown, the high-grade workmanship and well-made appearance of every model—all made by experts of years' experience—a fact manifest in the air of creating these fascinating Dresses.

Gowns and Dresses for Dinners, Luncheons, Receptions, Dances, Club Meetings, Card-Parties, for wear at Seaside or Mountain Resort, for Park Promenade—for every dress occasion. Gowns that distinguish the wearer as fashionably attired wherever she may go—the imprint of good taste.

The materials include Imported Chiffon over Silk, Imported Silk Crepes, Taffetas, Lingeries, Challies, Embroidered Voiles in Color Combinations, Embroidered Marquisettes and Crepes, Messalines, Foulards in border effects, Crepe Meteors, Pongees, Nets, Eolliennes, Crepe de Chines, Rajahs, Tailor-made Satins, etc.

BANGOR BEGINS WORK OF BUILDING A NEW AND GREATER CITY

Fire Ruins to Be Cleared at Once and Reconstruction Plans Considered.

BANGOR, May 2.—Under the direction of a Committee of Public Safety, Bangor to-day began the gigantic task of rebuilding the devastated city.

The work will be done with Bangor money and by Bangor residents. That was one of the first things decided by the committee.

Another was that, in no spirit of false pride, but with the consciousness that "Bangor can take care of its own," no outside aid or assistance is necessary, although the kindly spirit that prompted the many offers received is fully appreciated by officials and citizens.

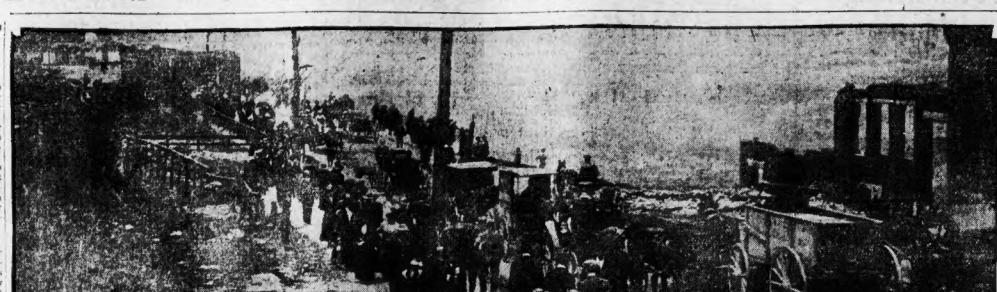
For Queenlier City.

The city is not weeping or whining over the loss. Stunned at the first by the magnitude of the disaster, it has rolled up its sleeves and started out to build a new Bangor, one that will be a bigger and busier and better Bangor than the one which won for itself the title of "The Queen City of the East." The new Bangor will be queenlier than ever.

Owing to the extent of the fire-swept area and the many complex problems that have to be solved, it was decided by the Mayor and City Council that extraordinary measures would have to be taken and that the appointment of a committee of public safety, which would practically supersede for the time being the city government, was the only way out of the difficulty.

Public Safety Committee.

The City Council promptly passed an order for the appointment of the committee by the Mayor, designating that official as chairman. He has appointed Aldermen John P. Fleming, George Krutzenbiller, Charles H. Brown, Adelbert W. Sprague, Oliver L. Hall, Benjamin W. Blanchard and James H. Haynes. Councilmen Frank A. Thatcher, George D. Harding, Nat C. Ayer, William D. Mathison, James A. Condon, J. E. Canning and E. E. Kollee and, on the part of the citizens, ex-Mayors John F. Woodman, W. R. Pierce, J. P. Bass and F. H. Bragg and Hugh J. Chaplin, I. K. Stetson and C. P. Stone.



This photograph shows a portion of Franklin street, where the fire raged fiercest. The site of the Windsor Hotel is included. Only smoldering ashes remain of the structure.

Blame Fire to Gamblers.

Blame for the fire which caused a property loss, now estimated at about $4,000,000, is placed on members of a gang of dock laborers who were playing poker in Green's hay shed on Sunday afternoon. A longshoreman, who is familiar with the place, has stated that one of the players dropped a lighted match on the floor and that the loose hay on the floor at once caught the flame. In a moment the interior of the place was ablaze, the longshoreman says, and the card players barely had time to dash out of the door.

Although optimistic Bangor's merchants and business men fully realize the magnitude of the task that confront them. The insurance amounts to about $2,500,000 and the local agents of the 200 companies carrying it have assured the Committee of Public Safety that the losses will be paid promptly. But even with this aid, the work of rebuilding cannot be done in a week. So many business buildings were burned that rents for places of this kind are at a high premium and more business men are unable to find a location to resume operations.

Fully 125 firms are seeking new or temporary quarters. The greatest need of all so far has been established in the Y. M. C. A. Building on the bank of the mall is being worked to-day on the Maine Central Railroad siding.

Telegraph service has been patched up, but it will be long before the telephone service for at least ten days and it is feared it will be a month before street car service can be resumed and the same time before the street lighting system will again be in operation.

While there have been no reports of looting in the burned district, Mayor Mullen and members of the Committee of Public Safety think it best to remove the National Guardsmen and the University of Maine cadets from guard duty about the ruins in the business section where are untold hundreds of thousands of dollars in money and personal property.

Large numbers of drunken men and suspicious-looking characters appear to have flocked to the city since the fire and to prevent looting, ball cartridges have been issued to the men of Company G, Second Regiment, M. N. G., and the university cadets. Some apprehension has been felt about issuing ammunition to the youthful cadets, but they have had strict orders to be careful about firing and to aim and shoot in the air.

Every saloon in the city, and Bangor had 287 before the fire, has been ordered to close by the police, but while this order is being apparently obeyed liquor is easily obtained, judging from the number of drunken men seen on the streets.

Eleven places where liquor was sold were burned out, but there are 256 left.

No Aid Now, Says Mayor.

Mayor Mullen early to-day said to the AMERICAN reporter:

"Bangor will get its breath and courage and then we will go right at building up again. We are going to find out first how many there are in the city who are without homes and then we will begin to clean up and open the streets. I have received offers of help from Boston, Portland, Rockland and other cities, but I believe we are going to be able to take care of our own unfortunate ones without their aid. We shall not accept any aid until we find that it is absolutely necessary.

"Bangor's greatest loss is not the buildings burned. The city will not be retarded by this fire, as it will be quickly rebuilt. Bangor has suffered irreparably, however, by the destruction of the stately elms on her picturesque thoroughfares. They have been killed and it will take years to grow trees to take the places of the burned stumps. If there is any regret for what happened Sunday, let it be expressed for the loss of our magnificent foliage.

"Of the 2,000 families burned out, seventy five are destitute. Ways and means are being devised for their relief. Most of the owners of business blocks and homes that were burned are financially able to rebuild as soon as the ruins cool sufficiently and material can be obtained.

"The fire did its worst in the streets lined with expensive and substantial homes, notably Broadway and French street and the cross thoroughfares on the East Side hill, after consuming the business structures on Exchange, State and Harlow streets.

"The only part of the city within the blackened area wherein people of slender means lived was in Cumberland street on the edge of the fire zone and there property was owned by citizens of financial responsibility.

Mayor Mullen has had a canvass made of those whose homes were destroyed, in case there should be any without a place of refuge or not in a position to obtain and furnish another home. Mrs. Jennie Johnson, the city missionary, also conducted an inquiry, and from both reports the Mayor was satisfied that there was little, if any, suffering in consequence of the fire which could not be relieved by the resources of the municipality or the people of the city.

Aid the Homeless.

Mrs. Johnson said that she and her agents had found seventy-five families that required assistance for their present support or to open a new home.

All have at present relatives or hospitable friends that are willing but not able to do all that is needed. Mrs. Johnson, allowing for the possibility of some impoverished households being overlooked, said she thought that not more than 100 families should receive aid.

Arrangements have been made to care for them through the regular charitable organizations and Mayor Mullen said last night, no one was without a place to sleep or in search of food.

As fast as a case is reported by Mrs. Johnson relief will be extended and later to those out of work sufficient money will be given to hire and furnish new homes.

Bangor may thank the stout rear walls of the Bass building for checking the spread of the fire on the west side of the river. But for that city the flames would have swept that section of the city and licked up the City Hall and scores of other buildings. The worst losses in the wealthy residential section were sustained along Broadway, French and Centre streets, and the cross thoroughfares, state, Cumberland, Somerset, Cumberland and Garland.

In French and Centre streets there is hardly a house standing and there are stretches of yawning cellars along the west side of Broadway, with occasionally a lonely dwelling standing and slightly scorched.

They were comfortable, attractive houses, with large, old-fashioned fireplaces and large, roomy apartments, with stables and garages, and they were occupied by many of the old families, housing as well boisterous whose value could not be estimated.

Broadway was noted for its rows of fine old elms, which gave a character to the street that can hardly be restored. Scarcely one of the handsome trees, which were the pride of the residents, is left alive.

Freaks of the Fire.

Now that Bangor has had time to catch its breath, people are talking of some of the strange freaks of the fire. When it seemed that the fine, old Colonial mansion of Franklin A. Wilson on Somerset street was doomed, the furniture was removed and the firemen started to lock the doors.

"Don't lock the doors," yelled someone. "There's a girl in there."

The firemen made a search, and in the kitchen saw a maid calmly making up several bundles to take out.

"Get out of here quick, if you don't want to be roasted alive," shouted a fireman as he rushed into the kitchen.

"Now go on and don't bother yourself," replied the domestic; "I've got to pack my trunk yet and pack her trunk also, for the flames completely jumped the house."

The only two killed in the fire were John M. Scribner and George A. Abbott. Frank A. Hinckley had a narrow escape, while trying to put out flames on the roof of the Episcopal Church. The front of the building beneath him burst into flames and his escape was cut off. Hinckley seized the bellrope and made his way down to safety.

BOSTON CHIEF SEES EFFECTS OF DYNAMITING

BANGOR, Me., May 2.—Fire Chief Mullen of Boston was here for several hours observing the effects of dynamite in stopping the progress of a fire.

As a result of his observations Chief Mullen is strengthened in his belief that dynamite is useful only where there are open spaces between the buildings, so that the blowing up of a building leaves a wide breach. He thinks that the explosive would accomplish nothing in a closely built city like Boston.

Chief Mullen was accompanied here by former Commissioner Benjamin Wells and former Lieutenant Joseph Webber of the Boston Fire Department.

The Knock-out Blow

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but to the stomach we are utterly indifferent, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out.

Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol—pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Golden Medical Discovery." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of but you don't—and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If not promptly supplied trade elsewhere.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

REGARDS HIS CURE AS A MIRACLE

This Illinois Man Had Stomach Trouble and Was Becoming Paralyzed.

Mr. J. F. Bennington, of Dallas City, Ill., regards his cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a miracle. He is well known both at Stronghurst, Ill., where he formerly resided and at La Harpe. For years he has been recommending the pills that cured him. He says:

"My stomach trouble, which afflicted me for about two years, began with a general weakness. I didn't have strength enough to hold up my head and could eat nothing but heated food for over six months, while it was more than a year before I could eat any solid food. I had palpitation of the heart and my breath was short. My left leg and hand gradually became numb and I could not use either for a long time. At first my hand felt full of needles when I closed it; afterwards there was no feeling in it at all. I had many sleepless nights and suffered intensely.

"I doctored at Stronghurst and La Harpe and had two specialists from Chicago, but their treatments did not help me. My brothers moved me to La Harpe from Stronghurst during my sickness but I had no hopes of ever getting well. I took electric treatment without any help and many medicines with no better result. My home doctor came to see me one morning after he had been treating me for three months and told me that he couldn't do any more for me and that I ought to go to the Springs. But as I couldn't sit up or walk I kept on trying different doctors for eighteen months. When one is sick some one always suggests a remedy and in my case an old lady friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I took them for two weeks, carefully following the directions and at the end of that time began to crave a good meal. My hand and leg got so that I could use them again. I gradually regained my health and weight and have worked as ever from that time. I owe my recovery to the use of Pink Pills and always recommend them to my friends and relatives expected to hear of my death."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

JURY TO DECIDE FATE OF MRS. FLORENCE DODGE CHOSEN AT GUILDHALL

trying to get the operator. I got no response. Then I ran from the house."

Then Mrs. Dodge went to the home of the Rev. H. C. Howard, her next door neighbor, saying, "Heath has shot himself."

The statement of Mrs. Dodge to Mrs. Heath is considered a strong part of the Commonwealth's story. Probably no portion of the statement made by Mrs. Dodge is more important from the State's point of view than the following:

"The doors were all locked," Mrs. Dodge said. "Nobody was in the house besides Mr. Heath and myself. I don't see how anyone could have shot him. Mr. Heath must have shot himself."

There is not a single witness to the shooting of Heath. The case is unlike any ever tried in this State. The testimony will be circumstantial. The only corner, Dodge, about the fact that Heath was painting at Mrs. Dodge's home, so he went down. Mrs. Dodge was, according to her own story, alone in the house with him. The government will try to show that Heath did not shoot himself, but that he was murdered.

Will Read Jurors' Mail.

So widely is Mrs. Dodge related among the families of this section that fifty-seven jurors were examined before the State and the defense could agree on the twelve that were finally to constitute the panel. The questions put to the talesmen indicated that the State expects to show much of circumstantial evidence and would bar any prospective juror who had had any relations with Mrs. Dodge since she was arrested and released on bail of $12,000.

When the jurors were sworn, Presiding Judge Hall informed them that their mail would be examined before they were allowed to read it, and that any letter which might contain reference to the trial would be sequestered.

The jury is as follows:

Foreman, A. W. Bosworth, merchant, Brighton.

L. J. Peyser, blacksmith, Brighton.
George H. Davis, farmer, Concord.
A. H. Williams, farmer, Concord.
William F. Deering, farmer, Guildhall.
Eugene Rivers, farmer, Brighton.
Fred Prissell, farmer, Canaan.
Carl E. Ball, farmer, East Hanover.
C. D. Thurston, civil engineer, Brighton.
Edward H. Bazin, mechanic, Concord.
Alexander J. Smith, farmer, Granby.
Otis Bussell, farmer, Bloomfield.

The best legal talent in Vermont is arrayed on both sides and the battle between the lawyers promises to be one of the hardest fought in the annals of the Vermont bar.

Attorney General Sargent introduced the State's case and called as his first witness Wyman Watson of St. Johnsbury, a civil engineer, who had prepared plans of the Dodge house and grounds and the surrounding premises, including that of Lunenberg. The plans were set up at the right of the jury box so that Mrs. Dodge be in constant view of the court and the jury.

No Visit by Jury to Scene.

After a conference between the attorneys in the case and the judges it was announced that the jury would not visit to the scene of the crime because in the opinion of the court, the plans were sufficiently explicit.

After a recess the witness Watson again resumed the stand to point out under the questioning of the prosecutor the points by which the State hopes to fix the guilt of Mrs. Dodge. He described minutely what he said were bullet holes and the marks that indicated where the body of Heath lay, where the revolver lay, the position of different pieces of furniture. The measurements between these points were given in detail, and the location of the telephone in the dining room was pointed out.

At the conclusion of the direct testimony of Mr. Watson, Judge Hall asked:

"Would the Bing rug have stood as marking the course of the bullets indicate that they were fired by someone in the door into the front hall, or by someone actually in the hall?

Course of the Bullets.

The witness hesitated, and Attorney-General Sargent interrupted to say that the plans showed fully the probable course of the bullets and indicated where they hit the wall dividing the bedroom from the front hall and the position of the door.

Watson was then examined as to the condition of the paint on the baseboard and said that the fresher paint showed where Heath had been at work. He was then turned over to Attorney Jones, who brought out no new points.

W. E. Balch, a photographer of Lunenberg, went on the stand at 11:45 and identified four photographs which were marked as exhibits as pictures he had taken of the Dodge house on the Monday following the death of Heath.

The first photograph showed the Dodge house from the road. The second a view from the hall through the open door into the bedroom, in which lay Heath on the floor and marks on the ceiling are shown. The third is a view taken just outside the front door on the piazza, and the fourth is a picture of the back corner of the rear door of the bedroom. Salient points in the four pictures were brought in the course of the fury and the court then adjourned for the noon recess.

While these plans were being adjusted, Mrs. Dodge laughed and joked with Colonel Dale and his wife and with her daughter, although never for a minute did she turn her attention from what was going on. She showed great interest while the witness, pointing out on the map the room in which the body of Heath was found, the hall and floor plan of the house, the spots where the bullet holes were found and the lines which traced their probable course.

Judge Albert Alfred A. Hall of St. Johnsbury shares the bench with Judge C. H. Mediuliness of Granby, followed every question with the closest attention. Judge is a small man, with gray hair and a closely cropped gray mustache, but with the dignified bearing that befits the presiding Judge in a capital case.

Court Is Crowded.

All the lawyers for the State and for the defence were in court. Attorney-General John G. Sargent is in charge of the State's case, and assisting him are Harry B. Amey, State's attorney of Essex County, and former State's Attorney George L. Hunt.

For the defence the senior counsel is Colonel Porter H. Dale of Island Pond, and with him are associated Frank W. Blodgett and Harland B. Howe of St. Johnsbury.

The courtroom, as the the opening session yesterday, was crowded in its capacity. The number of Lunenburg witnesses alone represents at least a tenth of the towns population and the excitement with which the case has aroused all over Vermont has drawn many to Guildhall.

After the plans of the Lunenberg scene of the tragedy had been presented a short recess was taken.

Ruins of Riverside Boat Club House

RIVERSIDE BOAT CLUB HOUSE ON CHARLES RIVER, BURNED AT LOSS OF $20,000.

Cups, banners, shields and other trophies won by members of the club during the forty years of its existence were destroyed by fire when the famous clubhouse of the Riverside Boat Club on the Charles River, Cambridge, one of the most prominent rowing organizations in the East, was burned to the ground early to-day. Nearly fifty shells and more than that number of rowboats and other craft stored in the clubhouse were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

Three alarms were sounded for the blaze which threatened the immense plant of the Cambridge Electric Light Company and the buildings of the Riverside Press. Twelve horses and as many wagons were saved when the stable of the lighting company caught fire. A building occupied by the American Storage Battery Company also took fire. Sparks and blazing embers carried by the wind fell on the roofs of several wooden tenement houses in the vicinity and caused much alarm among the occupants.

Horses Run Seven Miles.

The fire spread to the coal pockets of the electric light company and the firemen cut loose a barge which was moored to the wharf adjoining the boat house. The barge was loaded with coal and drifted up stream until it came to a stop at the Western avenue bridge. The horses rescued from the burning stable, for nearly two hours, ran wild through the streets of Cambridge. Two of them were found on Garfield street, North Cambridge, seven miles away.

No fish did the fire spread that the building was in flames before the blaze was discovered. The flames illuminated the sky and hundreds of people flocked to the spot from all parts of Cambridge and Brighton.

The Riverside Boat Club is one of the most noted rowing associations in this country. Its members included many prominent oarsmen. Not during the past forty years have won prizes in nearly all the big regattas in this country and Europe.

The clubhouse was one of the landmarks of Cambridge. It was a two-story wooden structure facing on the Charles River with an entrance on Allbro street, Cambridge. In the rear of the boathouse were the stable, coal pockets and workshops of the Cambridge Electric Light Company in the order named and a two-story brick building occupied by the American Storage Battery Company. On the opposite side of Albro street was the plant of the River side Press.

Western avenue and Blackstone street formed the remaining boundaries of the electric light plant and both of these streets were lined with wooden tenement houses.

Started by Cigarette?

The members of the club held a chowder party last night, and it is believed a lighted cigarette or cigar butt started the fire. Charles Smith, a watchman in the power house of the lighting plant, which feeds the entire city of Cambridge, discovered the fire. He was crossing the yard on his way home when he saw the flames.

Smith, with William Moran and Fred Shay, rushed into the stable and led the horses out, allowing them to run free. Twelve wagons and several sets of harness were also dragged from the stable before it caught fire. The fire leaped across to the coal pockets and then backed up into the building occupied by the American Storage Battery Company.

When Chief Bunker arrived the fire was spreading rapidly, and he ordered two more alarms, calling out all the fire apparatus in Cambridge.

Four eight and six four-cored shells, two doubles, thirty singles, sixty rowboats, twelve working boats and numerous other pleasure craft were stored on the first floor.

The firemen tried to save some of the boats, but the fire fell around them in such a way that they were obliged to confine their efforts toward saving surrounding property.

On the second floor of the boathouse was the dance hall and billiard room, the walls of which were bedecked with the prizes won by the club members. Half an hour after the discovery of the fire the second floor gave way and collapsed. The flood commenced to burn and the coal barge moored to the dock caught fire. This was then cut loose by the firemen and allowed to drift up the river.

NAME WOMAN'S BEST QUALITY

CASH PRIZES IN WOMAN CONTEST

"What is the most excellent quality in woman?"

Write your answer to Eleanor Ames, The AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

The best letter wins a cash prize of $10, the next best $5, and there are $1 prizes for the five next best letters.

By ELEANOR AMES.

Every day there comes to me some astonishingly good arguments upon the question: What is the most excellent quality in woman?

Here is one from the correspondent who said that selfishness made a woman ideal. And the argument was that a selfish woman is a greater love for her children and a greater devotion for her husband, as she watched his interests with greater keenness and saw to it that he did not fall by the wayside. The selfish woman, it was argued, does not allow her husband to spend his money foolishly, she does not allow him to get in the danger zone of other women's wiles. Is this all true? Must a woman be selfish to prove an ideal wife or sweetheart?

Thousands of my correspondents say no. But what is your opinion? It is the diversity of judgment among women as to the quality that is making this contest one of the most interesting I have ever handled.

Now I inspire you to give me your opinion I will give a cash prize of $10 for the best letter, $5 for the next best and $1 each for the five next best letters. You may find it worth while to write me your opinion in this most important question.

Write plainly on one side of the paper only. Address letters to Eleanor Ames, The American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Here are some of the letters received:

True Womanliness.

The most excellent quality in woman is true womanliness, for true womanliness includes virtue, love, charity and that indescribable home making ability which makes a husband or any one within the gracious influence a happier, healthier, worthier citizen. Very respectfully yours,

JAY LOWELL, Meadon.

In this world of constant change and uncertainties I would suggest adaptability as the art of making the best of things. This, coupled, as it should be, with a sense of humor, seems to me to be the most satisfactory and desirable quality a woman can possess. Without adaptability all the other virtues and good traits often fade away as mist before the sun in the face of adversity or rise all sense of proportion in prosperity.

G. M. SMITH,

TO MARRY AFTER THREE DIVORCES

New England's most remarkable romance was disclosed in the taking out of a marriage license at Portsmouth, N. H., by Herbert W. Pattee and Mary A. Sawin, each three times married and divorced. They declared they are to be married on Thursday. The groom-to-be is fifty-three years old, the son of W. H. Pattee of Allington. He was born there, then it was known as West Cambridge. His bride-to-be is thirty-eight years old, the adopted daughter of George Sawin of Newton and Cambridge. Her mother, deceased before her adoption, was Mrs. Jennie S. Parker of Newton.

In 1904 Mr. Pattee sued his wife, Alice C. Pattee, for a divorce. They were married in 1884. He testified at the time that after living with her until 1902, he went to Nashua, and on his return entered into an agreement with his wife, the terms of which they agreed to live separate marital relations unless they should at any time vacate the agreement. Before that time he had agreed to pay her $15 a week. The payments continued until the divorce suit was brought. The libel was dismissed.

Pattee had named Henry A. Solls. Two timony was offered that Mr. Pattee went to 9 Nashua street, Boston, with a detective, to find his wife with Solls. Pattee testified that he told Solls he had no desire to arrest him at that time. He also said his wife had "unpacked a trunk of hers" and that once she took a loaded revolver and threatened to shoot Solls and herself.

The following year Mrs. Pattee brought suit against her husband for desertion. Support and against Mrs. Mary Allen Sawin of Alice Marie Sawin, as she was then known, for $25,000, claiming alienation of her husband's affections.

MAY BREAKFAST ATTRACTS 3,000

More than 3,000 people of all ages crowded into the State armory at Lynn on Tuesday morning for the annual May breakfast given by the allied churches of Lynn for the Associated Charities. Long before the opening hour, 8 o'clock, over 200 people gathered in the street ready to make a rush as soon as the doors were opened. The 200 church women who waited on the 10 long tables were swept out of the way as the crowd surged to the tables and not until the tables were filled was any semblance of order obtained.

Nearly every clergyman, both Catholic and Protestant, in the city and the greater part of the city government mixed in the crowd, joking and shoving and acting like overgrown boys out for a lark. Seated at the tables and trying to grow with residents of the poorer sections, and children of all ages scampered about the hall dodging through the crowd fraternizing with the children of the lower end of the city.

Mrs. Alice M. Dodge is general chairman and was assisted by Mrs. F. S. Keene of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Mrs. Richard J. Kane of the Central Congregational Church, Miss Amber M. Bowen of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Miss Ella M. Lewis of the Washington Street Baptist Church, Mrs. H. N. Newhall of St. Stephen's Church, Mrs. Mary A. Day of the Friends Church, Mrs. Joseph W. L. Harding of the North Congregational Church, Miss Ruth Wood of the First Baptist Church, Mrs. Andrew Case of the Y. M. C. A., Mrs. Harriet A. Green of the South Street Methodist Church, and Miss Annie L. Newhall of the Trinity Church.

Miss Edenson is in charge of the souvenir counter.

MOVING DAY FOR MRS. WILLIAMS

After defying court orders and prominent politicians, and holding the fort against all comers for four years, Mrs. Annie L. Williams, mother of Hattie Williams, the noted actress, has abdicated. She is observing "May moving day" by taking her goods used in her settlement school to a store at No. 1804 Dorchester avenue, where she will continue her philanthropic work.

Although a writ of ejectment had been served on her, Mrs. Williams moved of her own accord. She says she moved when she found another suitable place and not until then.

Her success in securing a desirable place nearby was due in part to the faithful work of her little pupil, May Colerick, aged nine, of No. 20 Barnes street. It was this enthusiastic little supporter of Mrs. Williams who found that a vacant store could be rented and who did a good part of the work of routing the owners for Mrs. Williams.

Defied Politicians.

Mrs. Williams had successfully outfought eviction papers once before and probably would have again, she declares, had not she found so convenient a place for her settlement work and been satisfied to move. In December, 1907, the John F. Fitzgerald Club of Ward 24 secured eviction papers against Mrs. Williams, but she successfully defied the club and kept her school. The old colonial house which has been eagerly sought by various clubs and organizations was willed by Mrs. Mary A. Bailey, who died recently, to the Massachusetts General Hospital. The hospital brought suit against Mrs. Williams and secured eviction papers. But still Mrs. Williams held the fort until to-day, when she moved. She was aided by two boys of the neighborhood, Fred Campbell, No. 73 Shepton street, and Charles Brackett, No. 19 King street.

In telling of her plans Mrs. Williams said: "I intend to stay in Ashmont and continue settlement work as usual. Although I was practically forced out of No. 1806 Dorchester avenue, God has been good to me in securing a spot on almost the same site.

Fights for Justice.

"I want to keep up my work during the Summer vacation of the children, for this is when I can accomplish the most. I paid $16 a month for the old house, but now I will have to pay $20. I will rent one window of the store for a newspaper stand and the other half I will use to display children's clothes, which I hope to make to help pay the rent.

"I never charge for the milk and food that I feed the children at lunch times or that I give tired mothers who come for their children after a hard day's work. I will keep up my fight for honesty and right in Ashmont as long as I live."

DEDICATE READING CHURCH

The new $80,000 Reading Congregational Church was dedicated with over 500 present last night. The Rev. Lewis R. Brown, dean-elect of Yale, was the speaker. D. Augustus Newton, for twenty years pastor of a Winchester church, will be installed to the pastorate to-night.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO MIX-UP

Thomas G. Cashman of No. 25 Arcadia street, Dorchester, is in the City Hospital severely injured, George H. Dillon of No. 1 Marks street, Ovama Plain, is at his home suffering from bruises and shock, and three automobiles and a carriage are badly damaged as a result of a light rain making the asphalt pavement on Beacon street so slippery that the motor vehicles and the carriage came together in a general mix-up.

Dillon was driving a coupe on Beacon street, and a taxicab, driven by Peter J. Salmon of No. 2 Everett street, Chelsea town, was behind the coupe. Near Arlington street, Salmon started to pass on the left side of the coupe and had pulled out only a short distance when another automobile appeared from the opposite direction. It was owned and operated by George F. Kehew of No. 40 Lee street, Cambridge, who was riding with Cashman, his brother-in-law.

As Kehew attempted to swerve out of the way, his rear wheels skidded, first striking heavily against the coupe, then crashing into the taxicab. The coupe was thrown against the curbing and toppled over on the sidewalk. Dillon fell with the carriage. The horse was knocked down.

A third automobile came along. When the driver saw the other vehicles the brakes were applied and the car skidded about and crashed into the sidewalk. This machine lost one front wheel and knocked down a tree. It was operated by Warren H. Keay of No. 40 High street, Medford.

ENDICOTT, FRANKLIN TREASURER, RESIGNS

At the annual meeting of the managers of the Franklin Foundation, in the office of Richard Olney, the president, William Endicott resigned from the office of treasurer, his place being filled temporarily by James J. Storrow. All the remaining officers of the board were re-elected. A plea for manufacturers to excuse younger employes and apprentices for two or three hours a week late in the afternoons for study at the Franklin Union, such study to supplement the employes' regular work was made by Director W. B. Russell in his report to the board of managers.

SAILOR ON VIRGINIA CHOKES TO DEATH

J. M. Ryan, twenty-seven, a member of the crew of the battleship Virginia at the Charlestown Navy Yard, is dead. The ship's officers decline to state the cause of death, other than that it was natural, and at the naval hospital, where an autopsy was performed last night, it was said there was no definite as to the exact cause. That Ryan was choked to death by something lodging in his throat or that he struck his throat accidentally and a piece of tobacco lodged in his windpipe was the statement of members of the crew.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASE AT PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 2.—The first case of infantile paralysis to appear this season, following the epidemic of the infantile disease here last January, has just been reported to the Board of Health. The case is that of a child of ten years.

PEACE ENVOYS ARE GATHERING

BALTIMORE, May 2.—"Peace on earth, good will to men" is the keynote of the nation who have come from all parts of the country and are here to-day preparing for the opening of the Third National Peace Congress to-morrow. The visiting peace advocates have been given the keys of the city and hosts and hostesses are vying with each other to do honor to the nation, all figures upon whom all eyes will be turned the next three days.

The significance and import of the Third National Peace Congress can hardly be exaggerated. Its forerunners, held in New York in 1907 and Chicago in 1909, put in tangible shape the movement that had long been considered but a dream of idealists. This one will take up the burden where the others left off and it is expected that action will be taken that will put the future of the movement in a definite line of progress that will lead to the achievement of concrete results.

Two Phases of Work.

The Congress will deal with the two leading phases of peace work—the awakening of the public conscience by addresses directed against the folly and the injustice that result from war, together with the economic waste of universal armaments, and the practical means of making war difficult by establishing substitutes which will take away the excuse for war.

It is realized that in lies within the power of the Congress, and the power of the various governments to-day to set up these institutions, either in the form of an international court of justice, or of treaties which will provide for some other form of arbitration either by endowing the interparliamentary union with real legislative functions or developing the present conference in that direction by the codification of international law; or, by that which would perhaps take the place of and make unnecessary an international police, an agreement between the leading powers to stand back of the decisions of an international court or arbitral tribunal. But whether the governments will take action in this direction depends largely on the pressure which the public may bring to bear. Consideration of this will be one of the most important duties of the Congress.

Taft to Open Session.

The Congress will be opened in McCoy Hall of Johns Hopkins University to-morrow afternoon by President Taft. Following the invocation by Cardinal Gibbons, Mayor Mahool will deliver an address of welcome to the visiting peace workers. Hamilton Holt, president of the Congress, will then speak on "A Journal of Peace," Andrew Carnegie, Dr. Benjamin Trueblood, of the American Peace Society, Boston; Professor Leo S. Rowe, of the University of Pennsylvania, and William C. Dennis, of Washington, will also speak at the opening session. Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott and Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Bigelow will discuss on "A Substitute for War."

The Third National Peace Congress is the outgrowth of the original enthusiasm of the American Peace Society, which initiated the first and second Congresses. The permanent organization at the latter, that resulted in the arranging of the present Congress, is in charge of the affairs under the auspices of all the leading societies of America devoted to the settlement of international disputes by means other than war.

RAISE $1,000 MORE TO AID M'NAMARA

The McNamara defense fund is $1,000 richer to-day as a result of the May Day meeting of Boston Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union, that being the amount donated by unanimous vote of the local to assist in the defense of the union men accused of complicity in dynamiting the Times building at Los Angeles. M. J. Young is vice-president of the international union of structural iron workers and was at the executive board session at Indianapolis when the McNamaras were arrested. He declared his absolute belief in their innocence.

SOCIETY OUT FOR THE POPS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Another season of Pops—Boston's great Bohemian rendezvous was inaugurated last night at Symphony Hall when, to the accompaniment of exquisite music, the tinkling of glasses, the swish swish of silken gowns and the pop, pop of the bottles, society, near society and the typical Bohemians rubbed elbows and enjoyed to the fullest the gay diversion. The great hall was filled and as one looked down from above the hats of the women made a very wonder garden of bloom and the latest of fashion's caprices was shown in all the Spring millinery as well as the gowns.

Great Array of Color.

The hats, for the most part, were all flower trimmed, some being made entirely of flowers, and the small helmet ones seemed the favored. Lavenders and blues in both gowns and hats were the most popular, while vivid reds and greens made pretty dashes of color among the lighter ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace G. Allen were among the early arrivals and entertained a large party of friends. Mrs. Allen wore a gown of white and white hat trimmed with huge blue plumes.

Mrs. John L. Thorndike, with her handsome daughter Olivia and several friends, came early in order to secure a good seat among the most conspicuous of the fashionables present. Mrs. Thorndike, who chaperoned the party, was in gray satin with black hat trimmed with black plumes, while Miss Olivia wore deft tone chiffon over white satin and hat of the same shade trimmed with blue plumes.

Mrs. Stephen Bennett was another of the fashionable matronly entertaining guests, among whom was her lovely daughter in coral pink chiffon. Mrs. Bennett wore mauve chiffon and hat to match.

Delightful Program.

Mrs. Gordon Means was among the younger matrons there and wore a fetching gown of dark blue chiffon over satin and small helmet hat of natural colored straw, trimmed with pink rose buds and tan plumes.

Miss Lillia Mitchell, who was with friends, was in white lace with large black hat, trimmed with black plumes.

Miss Elizabeth Porter and her sister Frances were guests of friends. Miss Elizabeth in dark blue chiffon and black hat, and Miss Frances in gray.

Mrs. Theodore Reiser was one of the most attractive of the younger matrons there in her gown was of black satin and her helmet-shaped hat of black was trimmed with deep red roses.

The program was delightfully rendered.

STRIKING UNION DISTRIBUTES BREAD

Hebrew Bakers' Union No. 45 today completed the distribution of 2,500 loaves of Jewish bread, brought from Stoughton, Mass., to this city by the union, in order for Boston to avert the famine threatened as a result of their eight-hour strike. Two non-operative bakeries also have been started by the strikers, one at Malden Square, Malden, and the other on Bickford street in the South End. The union's strike committee stated that no settlement will be made with any master baker who attempts to raise the price of bread because of the strike.

ARREST MAN SAVED FROM ENDING LIFE

Joshua W. Henderson, twenty-five, of No. 29 Hammond street, Roxbury, was locked up by the police of the Back Bay station after he had tried to jump into the Charles river basin from the esplanade, near the Harvard bridge. Henderson was seen climbing over the railing by Mrs. Mary J. Rodney of No. 68 Cherry street, Cambridge, who was on the bridge, and she called for help. Edward Voter of No. 152 Emerson street, Cambridge, seized Henderson just as he was going to throw himself into the water. He was dragged back over the rail.

New Way to Restore Your Lost Vitality

Strong, vital, manly men fascinate all who come in contact with their influence. As true as you are a living, breathing human being, I can restore your VITAL STRENGTH; there is not a shadow of a doubt as to what I can thus do. BUT there is a single condition, one restriction I put, a certain solemn promise I exact from you before you can expect a promise from me; namely, you must unconditionally agree now at once and forever to discontinue any debilitating excess of dissipation that you may be indulging; with this out of the way, I will do all the rest. Remember what I say; no matter what your present condition, no matter what has happened in the past, don't forget it and put yourself in my hands; everything will come out as you wish it. I use no drugs, no lotions, no medicines; I place no foolish restrictions upon you; just lead a natural life, get all the enjoyment you possibly can, but cease dissipation; always remember that. I can then restore your vital energy; I can take you out of the half-man class and put you in the spotlight of full, healthy, contented manly courage; I can make you feel young again and keep you feeling young to a ripe old age, because I drive into your system the one thing which keeps the whole organism in balance, namely, VITALITY. My HEALTH BELT is the greatest single self-treatment remedy or VITALITY RESTORATIVE that the world has ever known or probably ever will know. It is worn comfortably about the waist all night and every night for two or three months. Thus while you are sleeping it sends a great, soft, potent life-giving current of VITAL FORCE into your blood and nerves. There is not a moment's wait, it restores your vitality, it takes the pain out of your back, it makes you feel strong and virile, it drives away rheumatism, it cures kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders.

Let Me Send You This Book FREE

Fill in the coupon; let me send you at once my free booklet in plain sealed envelope; it is profusely illustrated with half-tone photos; keep it in your pocket for your reference; read the chapter on Vitality; read the chapter on Debility; read the chapter on those subjects which interest every man, young or old, who would be strong in manly vigor. It is a booklet which should be in every one's possession, and I will send one free, if you live in the city, call at my office, hours 9 to 6.

ADDRESS .....

MISS MAGUIRE, HURT IN WINDOW PLUNGE OF AUTO

WOMAN HURLED THROUGH GLASS

An automobile travelling thirty miles an hour skidded on the Beacon street hill, opposite the Parker House to-day, and crashed through a large window of the S. S. Pierce company store, hurling Miss Theresa Maguire, who was on the sidewalk, through the window. She was rushed to the relief station.

Witnesses say that a carriage crossed its path. In attempting to step quickly the blind wheels skidded, throwing the car on the sidewalk and it struck the window with a terrific crash. Miss Maguire was hurled through the window.

At the relief station the injured woman gave her address as Miss Theresa Maguire, No. 25 Allston street, Charlestown. She says she was walking up Beacon street when one was struck by the machine and thrown through the window. She landed in the midst of a display of cocoa cans. She suffered contusions of the back, abrasions of the limbs and cuts and contusions of the hands and face. She was able to walk to the operating room.

URGES TWO NEW CITY BUILDINGS

New Municipal Court buildings for Charlestown and South Boston are imperatively needed in the opinion of Councilman Hale, who told the City Council that both buildings now in use are more like relics of the Middle Ages and that conditions in them, especially the building in South Boston, are such as to be a disgrace to the city.

Councilman Hale made these statements in advocating the passage of the order introduced by Councilman Attridge providing for a new court house to cost $500,000 in Charlestown and one in South Boston to cost $65,000. It was stated that $30,000 appropriated for a bath house in Ward 15, but not used could be made available as a part of the funds for the new court houses.

The order was referred to the Finance Committee of the council.

JUST A HORSE ON MR. HAWLEY

LEE, May 2.—Any horse has a perfect right to be cheerful on the Fourth of July, of course no Kentucky horse would do so but the horse in this case was not used to old Kentucky, but was a Berkshire county horse and a white raisonne at that.

Filled to the brim with kindly feelings toward his fellow men and beasts alike, the William Hawley of Otis, Berkshire county, the other day took pas for made by urgently inviting, neigh, even insulting, that neighbor Harry Moultrair's fine bay horse take a drink with him.

The sad story of Mr. Hawley's lapse from accepted canons of etiquette was told in the Lee District Court, where he was hailed by force of the town constable, before and arraigned in the dock with other evil doers to answer on the charge that Mr. Moultrair was driving his horse, a member in good standing of the equine Q. T. V. B. along the road when the said Hawley approached heavily laden with liquor, juice and an obsession that neighbor Moultrair's horse should drink from a bottle of Holland gin that reposed snugly in said Hawley's hip pocket.

It was proved by the testimony of Moultrair that when Hawley invited the horse to drink the latter was almost dispelled "Neigh, Neigh!" laughter from the steed.

Whereupon the said Hawley, being insulted by the refusal of the devil, seized the total abstinence horse by the bridle and did pull the animal's head widely and unlawfully and against the statutes, etc., to pour the said gin down its throat. Whereupon the said Moultrair, not being wishful to see his faithful steed thus mistreated, did forthwith and right away rapidly to Lee, where he swore out a warrant for Hawley's arrest.

SECOND ARREST FOR ASSAULT ON VENDOR

A second arrest was made last night by the South Boston police in connection with the beating of Joseph Tapa of No. 8 Porter street, fruit vender, who is suffering from a broken nose and a possible fracture of the skull. Harry J. Callahan, fifteen years old, of No. 457 Southampton street, was arrested last night, charged with assault and battery. Yesterday John McCarthy, sixteen, of No. 3 Grimes street, South Boston, was arraigned on the charge of assaulting Tapa, and was held for Saturday's session of the Juvenile Court in $500 bonds.

MUST ACTRESS KISS? COURT TO DECIDE

NEW YORK, May 2.—Does an actress have to respond to a kissing scene before being discharged? Helen Schalder, sixteen years old, "ecile player, asked Justice Shell to-day to award her $50 a week salary, withheld since January 19 last. The defendants contended Miss Schalder refused to rehearse the kissing that went with her part as "ecile player, and also refused to wear a dress provided for her. She said she was willing to do her part, kissing and all, during performances, but wanted to leave out kissing in rehearsals

Saugus
Dover (Mass.)
Burlington
North Reading

Beginning May 1, the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company INCREASED TO FIVE MINUTES THE INITIAL PERIOD ON ALL TEN CENT TOLL CALLS MADE BY NUMBER. The five minute period now applies on toll calls within the Boston Metropolitan District, but in all other cases the new ruling will increase by two minutes the time allowed for the initial charge.

In addition to the above change, NEW TEN CENT, FIVE MINUTE, TWO-NUMBER RATES AND MUCH MORE RAPID SERVICE are introduced between Main, Fort Hill, Oxford, Richmond, Tremont or Back Bay Exchanges and the following points: Salem, Peabody, Marblehead, Dover (Mass.) THESE NEW RATES REPLACE EXISTING FIFTEEN-CENT, THREE-MINUTE, PARTICULAR PERSON RATES.

For the benefit of those not accustomed to making such calls, attention is called to the following points to be observed in calling the places to which the reduced rates apply:—

CALLS MUST BE MADE BY NUMBER ONLY. Calls for particular persons cannot be accepted. If the number cannot be found in the directory, the information operator will give it.

CALLS SHOULD BE GIVEN DIRECTLY TO THE LOCAL OPERATOR IN THE SAME MANNER AS WHEN A LOCAL CONNECTION IS DESIRED.

THE RECEIVER SHOULD BE HELD TO THE EAR UNTIL THE CALLED NUMBER ANSWERS OR A REPORT IS RECEIVED FROM THE OPERATOR. Toll calls handled under the new method will be completed with almost the same promptness as local calls.

W. C. PREE IS HELD IN $3,000

William C. Pree, executive secretary of the Fifteenth Ward Republican Club of Roxbury, active in the interests of James J. Storrow in the last mayoralty campaign, manager of the campaign of James J. Frothingham for Lieutenant Governor, noted as a reformer and uplifter and an advocate of the new city charter, was in the dock in the Roxbline Municipal Court to-day and waived examination on three counts of larceny.

He was held by Associate Judge Ware for the Norfolk County grand jury in $1,000 bail on each charge. He obtained bail shortly after noon.

Pree, who is a lawyer, was arrested in his office by Inspector Pierce of Boston police headquarters and Lieutenant Still of the Brookline police on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Lina Pree, his stepmother, charging him with the larceny of $300 in cash and a diamond ring, all of which he is co-executor with his stepmother, Mrs. Lina Pree. The complaint was made by Mrs. Pree in the charges to-day.

To-day two more charges were added, specifying the larceny of $450 more from the estate. Pree was unable to secure bail and spent the night in a cell in the Brookline police station. Pree, when asked about arraignment in court, but looked cautiously around the room as if expecting to see some of the political or personal friends who, he hoped, however, would after pleading, be was led back to his cell to await a hearing to-day to bail.

Pree lives at No. 10 Elm Hill Park, Roxbury, and has an office at No. 683 Tremont street, Boston. His mother lives at No. 250 Washington street, Brookline.

EDDIE CICOTTE WILL TRY TO EVEN UP SERIES

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Nationals from Washington can be beaten. That much was demonstrated by the Red Sox yesterday, and it was their aim to-day to prove that said Nationals can be licked twice in succession. If they can realize this aim, they will have a still larger ambition to-morrow, but to-day they were thinking only of evening up the season's series with the men of McAleer.

Eddie Cicotte was likely to be intrusted with the task of leading the Sox to an other triumph. It depended on how he looked to Manager Dale during the warming up. Eddie didn't have much against New York the other day, but he dropped a victory, with the aid of the ball. He was due to cop unaided this time.

It was expected that if Cicotte should offer Dixie Walker the position to Chute. It was Dixie's turn. The second choice were the great Walter Johnson, and the famous come-back, Tom Hughes.

To-morrow's encounter will wind up the first home engagement of Pat Donovan's boys, and when they go home they will be gone for a long time. So the fans will have to crowd all their May enthusiasm into the two next afternoons.

Unlucky Alva.

Does anyone know of a more unfortunate hitter than Alva Williams. Alva is about as lucky with his drives as Jack Thoney is with his arms, hands, legs and feet. A man on the Boston team has been meeting them on the same more regularly than Alva, since he has been filling in at first base, but his batting average doesn't show it. In fact, he hasn't much of an average with which to show anything. The pitchers are not fooling him much, but the fates are having a pleasant time at his expense. He walloped one of Groom's offerings hard enough yesterday to send up three or four ball games, but Clyde Milan muffed it with one of those sweet catches of his, running back at top speed and taking the ball over his shoulder.

And to make Alva more down on his luck, Ed Wilmerfeld had to cut in with a pretty pick-up on another occasion and deprive him of another hit. Even at that, it wasn't entirely yesterday that the jinx pursued Mr. Williams. It appears to be on his trail every day of the week, although it probably rests on Sundays, when it is vacating doesn't do any good.

Nunamaker Strong.

Speaking of one recruit catcher, for Williams was that before he became the daily first baseman he took one to think of young Leslie Nunamaker and the exhibition he is giving behind the plate in the absence of Bill Carrigan. Nunamaker can't seem to hit much, but he has done everything else well. Three Nationals tried to steal on him yesterday. Two of them were fagged easily and the other would have been if the receiver of the throw had done his part. The peg was there in good time, but William Evans said the runner, Elberfeld, wasn't tagged with the ball, and William roughly knows who he is talking about, in addition to knowing plenty of ways he is shirking as a mere backstop. He held Joe Wood in every inning of his game, and knows well with Karger to-day. He can show some fielding strength as to-day's he proved on Tuesday. (Ed is right.)

Eddie Karger drove a homer way over the left field fence in yesterday's close contest between the Sox and Washington. It was the sixth time in the history of the park that a ball has been sent over that wall. Duffy Lewis, "Kip" Selbach, Jim Delehanty and Pat Dougherty had turned the trick before Karger did it. His wallop cleared the top of the fence by a big margin and was ten feet inside the foul line so far inside that none of the Nationals offered a whisper of protest.

Karger's Home Run.

Incidentally, Karger's homer had a lot to do with the defeat of the Washington bunch, for the final score was 3 to 2, and one run less would have made some difference. Eddie didn't look very good at the start of the game. The Nationals were hitting him so loudly that it looked as if he would be unable to stick to the finish. But after they had gotten one for two rallies in three innings, he made up his mind that he'd had enough so he began serving up gay deceivers that they couldn't meet with any degree of success. And the way he pooled for Sox gave him was classy in the extreme.

The Nationals counted in the opener on, successive singles by Cuppy, Leibold and Elberfeld, which filled the bases, and a sacrifice fly by Milan. McBride then added their second and last run in the third on Leibold's double to left and Elberfeld's single, which was a lucky one that Mid caught on the handle of his bat. Another single by Ainsmith, Unglaub and Washington hits came after that, but the stingiest in the ninth was a bit scary.

Sox in the Lead.

The Red Sox then had their one run lead and wanted to keep it and finish the game. Ainsmith walked and Speaker then attempted sacrifice was a pop fly that Karger just managed to get. Then, on Somerlot's third strike Elberfeld got one with his theft of second. There were two outs now and a hit would tie the score, Cunningham almost made one. It was here that some of Karger's stuff was proved by to his rescue. Cunningham's rapid smash started between Engle and Gessler, Clyde lunged over in front of it, made the prettiest kind of a stop and then threw to first without half recovering. Williams had the throw a few feet in front of the long and he certainly did touch Cunningham, to make sure of it.

Groom was getting along all right until Karger's home run in the third disturbed his peace. Speaker and Lewis singled in the fourth and each moved ahead a base on a wild pitch. Engle's long fly to Milan enabled Speaker to cross the rubber and Lewis drove in the run that proved the winner with a real double between Milan and Cuppy. Southpaw Groom pitched the last four innings for Washington and was effective after a bad start.

JACK COULON ASKED TO MEET WINNER

NEW YORK, May 2.—Bantam Champion Johnny Coulon will be asked to come to New York to meet the winner of Frankie Burns-Young Wagner bout, which will take place to-night at the Whitehall A. C. in Brooklyn.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Herman Schaefer's attack of lumbago doesn't help the Washington team at all.

The Rustlers ought to brace now that Doc Miller has served out the term of his suspension and is back in the game.

Ninth position in Washington's batting order was anything but lucky yesterday. Groom, who held it first, fanned. Ainsmith was sent up to hit for him in the fifth and did likewise, and Otey made it three straight when he faced Karger in the eighth.

Frank Smith does his hard work before the game starts and is seldom in uniform during its progress. His arm is getting into shape fast and he may be asked to work on the trip.

Mr. Otey is big enough to pitch. He is also rangy and has an easy motion and lots of "stuff" when he gets warmed to his work.

Manager Donovan has changed his batting order. Harry Hooper is back at his old job of leading off, having swapped position with Gardner. Lewis has been moved to sixth position and Williams dropped to seventh.

Hub Perdue, one of the Rustler cripples, is a constant attendant at the Sox games. He was accompanied yesterday by Downing, the Princeton University first baseman, who is to get a trial with the Providence team.

Scout Fred Lake of the St. Louis Browns is still in Boston. He has been watching the college games in the East in the form of finding good prospects for the Mound City club.

Hooper made a successful attempt at the "push bunt" play in the seventh. He pushed the ball past Otey and to that person's left and beat it out despite Cunningham's rapid fielding.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—There is still a chance for the Boston Rustlers to start home to-morrow night with as many victories as defeats to show for their work on foreign fields. To do this they must win to-day's and to-morrow's games from the leaders of the league, and that is an enormous task the way Red Doolo's men are going.

Manager Tenney expected to use Frank Pfeffer in this afternoon's battle. This versatile athlete, who has been shifted around so much since he broke into professional baseball, has been setting the pace for the entire Boston pitching staff. Miller has yet to be charged with a defeat, has won two battles and saved one. Pfeffer will be in trouble with whiskers, but he seems to have outgrown it. Tenney figured that he would be about as effective a man as he could send against the Phillies. The alternate was Sam Frock.

The Philadelphia has gone crazy over its National League ball club and the attendance records will be shattered before the season continues at their present clip much longer. The Phillies are hitting the ball hard and their pitchers are going well. The Quaker fielders, too, are batting consistently enough to win games, their pitchers are not holding up their end.

Young Alexander proved too much for Tenney's team yesterday. His only base on balls resulted in Boston's only run. The Rustlers couldn't begin to solve him when men were on bases. Harry Coveleski pitched for Boston and fooled the Phillies for only a short time. Parson finished up the job and was lucky to escape unharmed.

WORLD FIGHTERS AT BOXING TOURNAMENT

NEW YORK, May 2.—The international amateur boxing tournament to be held in Madison Square Garden on the 19 and 20 promises to be the most successful affair of its kind ever held. Teams will represent Germany, England, France, Canada and other countries.

Advices from London to-day say that England expects to carry off the bulk of the laurels in the tournament. The American Boxing Association of Great Britain has completed a team consisted of Ira Warner, W. Allen, W. Spencer, D. Edstone and Bruce Logan. The last named they will sail for America on the liner St. Louis on Saturday.

PITTSBURG LOSES DISPUTED GAME

NEW YORK, May 2.—Pittsburg lost her protest of a critical play in the disputed contest played at St. Louis on April 24. President Lynch of the National League sustained St. Louis.

In the eleventh inning, with Bresnahan on second and one out, Wagner batted a ball to the pitcher. The latter's throw beat Bliss to first, but dropped from the first baseman, to the edge of the bag in making the play. Umpire Klem, in a line in which Hunter dropped the ball and Bresnahan scored the winning run.

BRITISH FIGHT FANS DISGUSTED WITH BOUT

LONDON, May 2.—British fight followers to-day expressed so much disgust over last night's fight between Jack Burns of California and Herbert Synnot of Australia, which resulted in a victory for Burns on points, that the men will probably be matched again before long in order to reinstate themselves in the public's grace. One sporting writer opens in his story of the fight said both were "as slow as polit bearers."

WINNER MAY MEET WELLS IN LONDON

NEW YORK, May 2.—The winner of the Tommy Mahoney-Jack Goodman bout, which takes place before the Twentieth Century A. C. at St. Nicholas Rink Tuesday night, may be given an opportunity to go to London and meet Mat Wells, lightweight champion of Great Britain. Jimmy Britt, the American who is promoting fights abroad now, has the deal in hand.

PITCHER COTTRELL REFUSES TO SIGN UP

Major league scouts are watching Pitcher Cottrell of the Providence team for the hopes of inducing the young man to sign a contract. Unlike many college players, Cottrell seems disposed to sign. Both Cincinnati and Cleveland have tried to sign him, but failed, so Billy Murray, in his official capacity as scout for the Pittsburg club, has up to Syracuse last week to watch him pitch.

BAN JOHNSON SUED BY WARD

NEW YORK, May 2.—The $50,000 suit for slander, directed by John M. Ward against a famous secretary of the New York Giants and now a New York lawyer, against Byron B. (Ban) Johnson, president of the American League, will come to trial to-morrow morning.

Ward's grievance against Johnson dates back to 1909, when Ward was a candidate for president of the National League. The election hung fire for weeks and resulted in the election of President Lynch. Ward alleges that at Cincinnati, while the election was pending, Johnson declared that he "would never stand for Ward as a member of the National Commission"; that "he wouldn't sit on the board with Ward"; that "Ward was a trickster," and that "his election to head the National League would be a blow to the best interests of the national game."

PITTSBURG LETS TWO PITCHERS GO

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 2.—During a meeting held by John Ward with the Pittsburg baseball team, the management closed up deals for the transfer of a pair of young recruits to the minors. Pitchers Alexander Malloy and Ernie Noel were let out, the first going to Nashville in the Southern League, and the latter to Oshkosh in the Wisconsin-Illinois League. Last year Malloy was in the Texas League. Noel was secured from the Pittsburg baseball team, club. These transfers reduce the Pittsburg roster below the stipulated limit of twenty-five players.

By E. V. B. PARKE.

Weather permitting, this afternoon, Harvard and Bates clash in their annual baseball game on Soldiers Field at 4 o'clock. To insure a good bit of twirling, Coach Sexton has chosen Captain "Chick" McLaughlin of the Harvard nine to start off on the mound. McLaughlin gave a good account of himself last year in this position and, as he has been keeping in trim daily for some such emergence as this, his pitching this afternoon should give an added interest to the game.

The Crimson supporters expect to see such slaughter as caused gloom over Soldiers Field last Saturday. Although Bates was beaten by Exeter by the rather humiliating score of 9 to 1, they have defeated the Pilgrim team 5 to 3. The Pilgrims are a number of former star Harvard players and recently put the blocks to the previous team of the New England League. Therefore, Harvard has a good pitcher to-day and a strong batting order, probably enough.

The Crimson batting order has been slightly changed in accordance with McLaughlin's going into the box. Gibson having been dropped to last place. Wigglesworth will be in left and should give a good account of himself, as he hit the ball pretty freely in the game Saturday. Otherwise, the team will go on the field in the same order as during the past three games. McLaughlin will be in the pitcher's position again to-day.

Duvey, the former Philadelphia Latin School pitcher who held the Harvard freshmen hitless last year, is down as one of Bates's twirlers for this game and possibly will be seen in action this afternoon.

RED SOX PITCHERS TO TRAIN FOR WIND

Joe Wood's experience Saturday of getting so winded by running out his three-base hit that it lessened the effectiveness of his pitching, shows that he was not in physical condition. "Kid" Nichols set the example for pitchers, which they do well to follow. So long as Nichols was in the box it was his custom, every day that he was not down to pitch, to time himself and run the outfield from the beginning of practice before a game until the finish. The result he had to vacate the box was that a trip around the bases at top speed never weakened his pitching.

Manager Patsy Donovan often has cited Nichols's example as a profitable one to follow, but it seems to be a most difficult one for many contract pitchers of the soundness of his advice.

JIMMY COLLINS HAS FAST BALL PLAYERS

Jimmy Collins in the Eastern League, Providence team, is happy. His nine got away from the mark in good shape and after winning four straight from Toronto is now leading the league. The Providence fans are enthusiastic.

DARTMOUTH PLAYS ANDOVER MAY 27

ANDOVER, May 1.—Dartmouth will play Phillips Andover Academy on May 17, the date originally assigned to Boston English High School, which canceled the game. Manager Douglas arranged this game with Dartmouth to take the place of the one called off on April 7 on account of the poor condition of the grounds. On May 19, an open date, a game with Niagara University will be played.

ARMY-NAVY GAME ON FOGEL'S PARK

PHILADELPHIA, May 2. It has been decided that the Army-Navy football game next November will be staged at the baseball grounds of the Philadelphia National League club at Broad and Huntingdon streets, this city. The success that attended the recent game on the ground has been responsible for the decision to have the annual contest staged here for the next two years, at least. The capacity of Fogel park for the Army-Navy game will be increased to accommodate 30,000 persons. President Fogel of the Phillies announced today that the plan was well under way and that he saw no reason why it should not reach a satisfactory ending.

COLLINS BIG FIND FOR MACK

Probably the greatest incident of "breaking into" baseball in the history of the National pastime, was that of Eddie Collins, the crack second baseman of the Athletics.

Edward Trowbridge Collins, first came into the limelight as a ball player at Columbia College. He generally played shortstop, but sometimes took the outfield before leaving college. Eddie got in wrong with the college authorities by playing professional ball under the name of Sullivan, and this ended his playing there.

Edward went over to New York and pleaded with John McGraw of the New York Giants for a chance to play on his ball team and was shut out.

Dave Fultz, a former member of the Athletics, happened to see the young Edward in action, and promptly took a shine to him, losing over to Philadelphia. Fultz liked it over with Mack and asked him to come over and take a look at the kid, and before night Collins was signed up.

Four le decided to play the field or second and he has proved the best second baseman in the game today. Collins was a star light in the world's champion ship series against the Giants, when he outshone his brainy little rival Johnnie Evers. He led the league in stolen bases and was well up in the batting list.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 122

Churches and Advertising

In one of the leading religious papers there recently appeared a letter upon church advertising in which this paragraph was printed:

"Securing attendance at church is a business proposition and sound to be secured by exactly similar methods to those of securing attendance at any other function, by publicity. I would suggest that the churches secure the services of a first-class publicity man who will see that the churches are properly presented in our daily press. The Church has a right to demand recognition by the press, but I feel sure they will gladly open their columns to interesting church news instead of the simple notices that now appear. The Church must urge people more strongly through the public press that they are wanted to share in the GOOD TIDINGS

"Matthew 5-14-15. Ye are the light of the world, a city set on a hill cannot be hid, neither do men light a lamp and put it under the bushel; but on the stand and it shineth to all that are in the house. Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."

The best way to attract attention to religious influence is to tell the readers of a popular newspaper about the vital and interesting features which a church has to offer, and how can the church do it better than by legitimate, dignified advertising. If a noted man is to preach at a well known church, advertise the fact in the paper of largest circulation to secure the greatest publicity for the religious movement.

There is no more reason churches should refrain from advertising than any dignified movement which the public ought to know about should refrain from letting the good work be known. If the churches did more advertising, there would be less empty pews. The trouble with the churches has been heretofore that they have kept up with the times in advertising the interesting services which they offer.

Any church which would begin dignified and persistent advertising in such a medium as the Boston American would find its sphere of usefulness greatly extended. No church could advertise its special services to nearly 400,000 people without attracting to its edifice a portion of the 400,000 readers. Therefore, the churches should take up advertising in the same thorough way that a merchant would.

The Boston American, having a circulation of 400,000 would be glad to communicate with any one who desires further information along this topic.

SAILOR WRESTLERS AT THE COLUMBIA

The two leading rivals for the heavyweight wrestling championship of the United States navy, Level of the Virginia and Sullivan of the Rhode Island, will meet on the Columbia mat tomorrow night for the title. The match promises to be a sensational one, for the men have been chasing each other all over the country, and this is the first time they have been on the same station. Sullivan is a big, raw-boned New York, where he has done most of his wrestling. He will be remembered as the giant here, while Level has clean up everything that has come his way with the exception of the time he was defeated by Ed Gotch. The friends are looking him to do the job against Sullivan. There will be a large delegation of the men backing Level, who is on hand to root for their favorite.

Barney Dreyfuss has joined the Chicago White Sox playing here with Duffy's club Sunday before last, and subsequently joining the St. Joseph club.

TOO CLEVER FOR O'LEARY.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Kammy Keller of England demonstrated at the Olympic A. C. that he knows too much about the art of self-defence for Young O'Leary, a local phantom. For ten rounds Keller hit O'Leary with an assortment of hooks, jabs and swings, and only at infrequent intervals was the East Side lad able to make an impression.

OUTPOINTS ASHE.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 2.—Kid Ashe of Cincinnati lost an eight-round bout on decision in the Southern A. C. arena to Hock Stone, who claims the southern championship. A right to the jaw in the fourth floored Ashe and a clinch almost knocked out Ashe.

KNOCKS OUT SULLIVAN.

TROY, N. Y., May 2.—Kid Henry of this city knocked out Tim Sullivan of Boston in the fifth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Cohoes.

'HIT EASY BOYS' -REFEREE WHITE

The Royal Rooters Referee stated that he will not referee others until the Red Sox of the West Division of the New York league work more with the Boston team. He said that he was getting a big reputation for being a "push over" referee and that they did not get hurt.

Referee White was next called on the stand and said that his affair with Wagner was a private matter and that he was getting paid for his services.

HACK TURNS DOWN OFFERS TO WRESTLE

LONDON, May 2.—George Hacken Schmidt, the Russian Jap who recently defeated Frank Gotch for the world's championship of wrestling, has turned down offers to wrestle Gotch, Zbyszko and Hackenschmidt in this country. Hackenschmidt has announced that he will not wrestle in America again.

BALL PLAYER IS FATHER OF HEIRESS

Barney Reilly of Boston, who is playing with the St. Joseph Club of the Western League this season, is the proud possessor of an heiress to the family name, having been so informed at Des Moines the other day, just as Barney with other members of the St. Joe Club were boarding a train for Sioux City. Reilly from late joined the Chicago White Sox playing here with Duffy's club Sunday before last, and subsequently joining the St. Joseph club.

CRACK RUNNERS IN FIFEEN-MILE RACE

NEW YORK, May 2.—Announcement is made today that seven world famous distance runners will take the field with a will start in the fifteen mile inter national race at Celtic park, Long Island, on the afternoon of Alfred Shrubb of Ashford, England, Billy Cummings of Canada, Fred Faulkner of Hamilton, Ont., Canada, Le Jonstrom of Sweden and William Kohlmeier of Flushing.

BOUTS TONIGHT

Pat Moore vs. Jack Redmond, Lou Paradise vs. Bert Hussey, Mike St. Louis vs. Frank Mack and Young Smith vs. Jimmy Sullivan at Armory A. A.

Jimmy Barry vs. Gunboat Smith at Oakland.

Owen Moran vs. Phil Brock at Dallas, Tex.

Dummy Maxon vs. Andy Morris New York.

Johnny Lore vs. Jeff Doherty at South Norwalk, Ct.

PICK MOORE TO BEAT REDMOND

Jack Redmond of Milwaukee, who boxes Pal Moore at Pat Gallagher's Armory A. A. tonight will be in the ring for the first time since he was knocked out by Packey McFarland in New Bedford went six rounds to a draw.

Pat Moore has made very satisfactory contests at his club and is a comer to be reckoned with. He has a good right and is a hard hitter. He has been training for the bout with Redmond for some time and will be in the best of condition. Redmond is also said to be in the best of condition and will be a hard man to beat. Redmond is a clever boxer and has fought many good men. He has been training for the bout with Moore for some time and will be in the best of condition. FELLSWAY CLUB HAS EIGHT RACES CARDED

For next Saturday at Combination Park the Fellsway Driving Club have arranged an inviting program of eight events, including some of the best horses owned by members of the club and Boston horsemen generally. Many horses are being trained for the events and a large entry list is expected. The program is as follows:

2:30 TROT AND PACE—Purse $100.

2:24 TROT AND PACE—Purse $100.

2:18 TROT AND PACE—Purse $100.

2:12 TROT AND PACE—Purse $100.

2:40 TROT—Purse $100.

2:35 TROT—Purse $100.

LADY ISLE, 2:06½, PACER, IS SOLD FOR $5,000

DOVER, N. H., May 2.—The Waller Bros. company has sold the bay pacer Lady Isle, 2:06½, to Thomas W. Murphy of the Poughkeepsie track, and the little mare will be driven here today. Lady Isle is a daughter of Lord Wilkes, by Lord Russell, and was bred by Walter Waller of this city. She is a handsome animal and last year by C. A. Shaw, Jr., of Somersworth, N. H., for $2,500. She was bred to pace, but developed into a trotter and was driven by Shaw in many races. She has been driven by Shaw in many races. She has been driven by Shaw in many races.

STRONG BID BY TECH IN N. E. MEET

Massachusetts Institute of Technology will make a stronger bid for the New England Intercollegiate track and field championship at Soldiers' Field this year. If the work of the men in training with Brown and its predecessors is an indication of the team's chances, except that of Captain Church, Amherst has very little to worry about when the dual meet with Brown in 1910 will be made.

GAGNON DEFEATED.

Fish Marsh defeated Gagnon in the thirteenth round of a ten-round bout at Bear Mountain last night. Tonight Marsh will be matched with Young Smith.

GALLANT HAD BROKEN HAND

FALL RIVER, May 2. Johnny Gallant of Boston was to have been matched with Young Mercer of Lowell before the local A. A. tonight, but Gallant has a broken hand and will be unable to box. Mercer will be matched with Young Barry of Boston.

WOLGAST BEST YET, SAYS JEFF

NEW YORK, May 2.—Jim Jeffries, ex-world's champion, has come out of his retirement long enough to give his expert opinion on the coming fight between Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers. Jeffries says in part:

"I do not pretend to say that Wolgast is a better fighter than I was, but I do not doubt about it. I have seen Wolgast in action, which I have not seen Rivers.

"He has a left-hand swing, and in process as the fight progresses, I think he will whip Moran, who in his most clever days could not stand up against the terrific punishment that Wolgast was afraid to take from Joe Brown because he felt sure he could not beat him as that member of the Pacific coast club has been reached.

BOSTON BOY'S TITLE SOUGHT BY HOERR

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 2.—Roland Hoerr who put up a great fight against E. H. Whitney of Boston's School of Instruction at the Y. M. C. A. before hundreds of enthusiastic boosters, is matched at city from now on to meet Whitney in the main bout, has gone into training to determine his physical fitness, to ascertain if he is strong enough to enter the ring with Whitney. Hoerr will submit to the examination by a physician before he will name a physician before such exhibition to make such examination of the participants.

Coach Steffen says his action is a result of the fatal termination of a boxing match at Waterbury recently, and because he believes that steps should be taken to prevent similar happenings.

William J. Lake was the man who died at Waterbury following his match with Jack Britton. And it was afterward stated that when Lake entered the ring he was in poor physical condition to fight.

FIGHTERS MUST BE CONDITIONED

NEW HAVEN, May 2. Every person who intends to enter the ring in this city must undergo a physical examination by the boxing commissioner, it was announced today. The examination will be made by a physician appointed by the commissioner, and will be to determine his physical fitness to enter the ring. The examination will be made by a physician appointed by the commissioner, and will be to determine his physical fitness to enter the ring.

HEAD-ON COLLISION IN FIST FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, May 2. The main bout at the Olympic A. C. tonight between Jack Britton of Chicago and Young Sullivan, completed the program.

BACK TO THE FORGE TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2. In order to keep down to the weight limit, Joe Mandot, the Indianapolis lightweight, has gone back to the forge in the shop where he worked before he became a pugilist. Mandot has been working at the forge for the past week and says he intends to keep at it until after his fight with Packey McFarland, which will take place here May 29.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Warren Sees Helen off at the Train.

HELEN was up at daybreak next day. Their train left a little before 8 and there was time to be done before then. Her trunk had been locked and strapped the night before and was already down in the hall. But packing one still had to be put in her hand-bag and [illegible]

She [illegible] moved around very [illegible] Warren still [illegible] lo[illegible]

[illegible] from [illegible] and [illegible] ear. [illegible] kept his face [illegible] night not in the bottom [illegible] be [illegible] asleep. It's fate was turned [illegible] this, but the strong lines of [illegible] were outlined under the covers.

Now was a case as the man she loved [illegible] peace or consciousness of sleep will [illegible] during the strongest instincts [illegible] her race. The maternal tenderness [illegible] soon as Helen looked down at him [illegible] to a soft and tender ache, and the self-aching [illegible] had her heart. For the moment [illegible] his coldness and indifference, [illegible] was the man she loved.

[illegible] overwhelming tender [illegible] by the bed. She could feel his [illegible] regular breathing. There was [illegible] face now, it was serene [illegible]

Was It All a Delusion?

Surely it was a mistake. Where [illegible] not be happy together. What [illegible] go on this way? Her [illegible] all been imagining under [illegible] Indian. And when one needs [illegible] thing would be "right" and he [illegible] kind and loving.

Absurd as the fancy was as she [illegible] there gazing at his sleeping face [illegible] to be less that when he awoke everything would be different, everything would be right. And that she could take [illegible] his arms and say in one word not to be [illegible] him, not even for a day.

Suddenly he stirred in his sleep [illegible] threw his arm out toward her. She [illegible] closer, her lips against [illegible] of his cheek.

Again he stirred, stretched his arms over his head and yawned. He opened and closed his eyes and yawned again, as though he were lazily hovering on the brink of sleep.

"Helen! What are you doing here? What time is it?"

"About 8. Isabelle has [illegible] from her eyes.

"8:0" What on earth [illegible] me up for?"

"I didn't mean to [illegible] came here to get you up."

The End of the Dream

"Well, hurry up and get [illegible] I want to sleep another hour yet." And turned over, his back [illegible]

She rose from her knees and [illegible] room.

She finished the packing [illegible] being with unshed tears. After [illegible] for it. At last [illegible] she heard Warren running the water for his bath. But she did not see him until [illegible] breakfast.

Now that I am leaving it [illegible] me say all the nasty [illegible]

Why, Warren, I thought [illegible] stop and take it all [illegible]

"What's the use of [illegible] a taxi and [illegible] can get [illegible] what [illegible] the office before I [illegible]

"And I thought [illegible] be with me until we started.

"If there is nothing [illegible] do, I'll stay. But [illegible] the same as if I [illegible] that time.

"No, there is nothing I want you to do," quietly. "I [illegible]

"Well, then [illegible] time. It will take you half [illegible] down. Here, [illegible] would be just like [illegible] another warning, for [illegible] be hurried off."

The next [illegible] of [illegible] final directions [illegible] of the apartments and [illegible] Delia promised [illegible] write Helen twice a week.

Warren at the Train

At a quarter to ten Helen was [illegible] seats to the heavy [illegible] she fastened over her hat. The taxi came promptly at 10. They reached the station [illegible] before half past. Warren [illegible] at the main entrance and [illegible] through.

It [illegible] already made up, [illegible]

He took Winifred, and Helen [illegible] and [illegible] down the long platform to the train.

He [illegible] at the sleeper [illegible] Attendants [illegible] "right here," and [illegible] the porter [illegible]

What [illegible]

Again Warren [illegible] "Lower 5."

Helen took [illegible] and [illegible] engage it for [illegible]

"Now [illegible] [illegible] perhaps [illegible] "Could [illegible] Helen's [illegible] here."

Warren [illegible] [illegible] get much all [illegible] it will cool off when [illegible]

Helen had [illegible] [illegible] gling desperately with [illegible] the heavy [illegible] [illegible] of parting had come, [illegible] bear it.

"Well," glancing at [illegible] 10:45, and [illegible] [illegible] much on time."

Helen leaned over and whispered [illegible] haltingly. "Warren, say [illegible] here, and I will go out [illegible] vestibule. Then [illegible] him at the last. [illegible] mother could be [illegible]

Warren shook hands with Mrs. Allen [illegible] "Well, hope you'll [illegible] trip. Take good care of Helen and [illegible] tired."

Tears for His Baby

Helen had never seen him kiss Winifred as tenderly as he did now. He seemed loath to part with her and when he finally gave her to Mrs. Allen's arms, and started down the aisle, Helen felt quite three years in his eyes. But they were for Winifred and not her.

She followed him out to the vestibule. There was no one there, and she put her head on his shoulders and sobbed outright.

"Oh, my dear, dear Warren!"

"There—there," patting her awkwardly on the back.

"Oh Warren, say something before I go, say that you love me, say—" but the rest was lost in her sobs.

"Why, of course I love you. There, don't be foolish. The train's pulling out now. Good-bye. Take care of yourself. And he dropped off the moving train, waving her a final good-bye.

The red plush and gleaming wood of the car blurred before her, as with the veil drawn closer, Helen groped [illegible] way back to her seat.

Desperate Desmond

NOW THE LAUGH STAN AND YOUR RICHARD IS MY POWER!
BUT YOU DESMOND
HORRORS! I'M LOST IN THIS QUICKSAND AND THE TIDE IS COMING IN. I WILL DROWN AND THE VILLAIN WILL FORCE RAYMOND TO MARRY HIM BUT IT MUST NOT BE. IT MUST NOT BE.
RIGHT OVER THE PLATE HE'S SAFE!
HELP AT LAST! I WILL FOIL DESMOND AND SAVE ROSAMOND
THANKS, SIR! YOU'VE SAVED OUR DESMOND WORK AND YOU SPOILED HIS PLOT!
ALL'S WELL STRANGLER THERE IS NOTHING MORE TO FLOAT MY BOAT AND DROWN HIM!
THERE IS HIS BOAT STRANDED ON THE SHORE
CURSES! I'VE LAST! THIS WATER IS RISING AND I CAN'T SWIM

Throwing people over cliffs seems to be a habit with Desperate Desmond. It's a mighty bad habit, and he ought to try to break himself of it now, but we suppose he will. Men of his mental caliber seldom try to improve themselves in any way. They are too busy concocting schemes for putting something over on their fellow-men.

Claude has landed right in the middle of a quicksand, and he can't get out. What makes it worse is that the tide is coming in. Looks as if his relatives might be able to collect some life insurance pretty soon, if he has put his policies up to date. If he hasn't, it's very careless of him, considering the risks he takes every day.

This gentleman is a surveyor who has been hired to lay out some city lots on the edge of the cliff. Some boob will buy the lots even if they are thousands of miles from civilization. But that's another story. At present our surveyor is wondering how he can use that hollow tree trunk to rescue Claude from the quicksand.

A bright idea strikes him, and he throws the tree trunk in such a way that our hero is safely inclosed in it, and the tide can't get to him. It was very kind of the surveyor to leave his work to help a total stranger out of a scrape, was it not? Some men would have been afraid to do it, for their employers would deck them for lost time.

But this surveyor is not that kind of a guy. He doesn't care if he loses a whole hour's time, if he can render a service to a fellow human being in distress. So he waits until the tide comes in, then gets a boat and rows out to where Claude is imprisoned in the hollow tree. And what's more, he's going to help our hero save Rosamond.

There's the villain now, with his savage henchmen around him. But Claude and the surveyor are not far behind. Still the our might have some chance to escape if he were not for that waterspout which threatens to engulf him and his pals. We shouldn't wonder if there would be some thrilling doings in to-morrow's pictures.

How He Got His Hurt

"I WANT you to do something for my leg, doctor," said the disfigured citizen who was using a crutch.

"What's the matter with your leg?" asked the eminent physician.

"Well, you see, it was this way," began the crippled individual, seating himself in the doctor's best chair. "I have taken the agency for Borenstein's vacuum cleaner, which I consider the most remarkable invention of the age.

"Most vacuum cleaners are only good for certain specified purposes, but this one will clean anything. You can clean a suit of clothes, or a dog, or anything under the sun. You can curry a horse with it—"

"I'm not interested in your vacuum cleaner, and I'm a busy man, so tell me what I can do for you."

"I'm coming to that as fast as I can, Doc. If you want to understand this case you simply have to let me begin at the beginning and tell of things as they happened.

"You see, I've been agent for a good many things at different times. One year I was selling Holmen's revolving churn, and the next year I handled Roger's fireless cooker, and so on.

"Well, I suppose you know Major Whipbleby? He's a cantankerous old cuss who has an office on the third floor of the Bunk building, and—"

The Doctor Loses Patience

"For heaven's sake, drop this long rigmarole and tell me what you want! I'll summon the janitor if you annoy me much more."

"Annoy you, Doc? Great Scott! I'm here to do business with you and have the money right with me to pay you!

"I was telling you about Major Whipbleby.

"A year ago I called at his office and sold him a new kind of ventilator, and he broke a stone ink bottle on my head.

"As I was saying, I can't be swerved from the path of duty, and so when I got the agency for Borenstein's cleaner I made up my mind at once to visit the major, for he needs something of the kind.

"I'd Like to Show It"

"I went up to his office and began explaining the merits of the Borenstein machine, which is really wonderful. A child can use it, Doc, it's so simple. After you've examined my leg and prescribed for it, I'd like to show you a working model I carry around with me. No other cleaner compares with it. You see—"

"I'll be hanged if I'll wait for the janitor," said the doctor, seizing the man by the coat collar. After landing at the foot of the stairs the damaged man gathered himself up and called back:

"That's just the way the major treated me, Doc! Kicked me out of his office with out giving me a chance to show what a wonder the Borenstein cleaner is! I was just getting to that part of the story when you butted in!

"Well, you're not the only doctor in town and I'll be dinged if I don't patronize one who'll treat me with proper courtesy!"

Can You Guess the Answer?

By KENNETT HARRIS

IT was very, very funny, but she didn't care for money,
So she said,
And she felt a large compassion for the devotees of fashion,
And she pitied the dull-witted
And sneered.
She had no respect for muscle, and of men who bump and hustle
She's a dread.
She was mournful, she was mystic, she was soulful and artistic,
So she said.
Then she found convention galling and could hear the wild scrolling
So she said.
She preferred the simple savage, who would rip around and ravage,
Without trimmels or enamels,
To well-bred
And well-tailored week-end Willies, or the big and burly Billies,
Thick of head.
Of the city she was weary, and society was dreary,
So she said.
But she wasn't really hazy in the attic, or plain crazy,
So they said.
While she didn't like a noodle, still the hoodle was the boodle,
And indeed it seemed ideal.
When she wed.
There was one, a very clever and delightful chap, who never had a bean,
And a common, low-browed lumber, quite a first-class money grubber
What's your guess?

Shrimp Flynn's Team Meets With Defeat

BEFORE a large and enthusiastic gathering of official fans, Boob Nelson's "Timperiners," by a score of 30 to 35, pinned a defeat on "Shrimp" Flynn's "Wildcats," in the first game of the opening series of the "Yung Amerika Malgumated Nationale," yesterday.

From start to finish, the game was what might be called a hard fight in more ways than one. In the sixth inning, with "Fat," the "Timperiners'" fighting third baseman at the bat, Socks, the official umpire, unfairly judged a ball for a strike, and, if you have seen him around this morning, you will notice that he is wearing a black eye.

Taking it individually, Shrimp Flynn played all around Boob Nelson. He wishes that put in the paper for the benefit of those who might think that he is not a better player than Boob.

Shrimp was four times at bat and got three hits, while Boob was the same number of times at bat, but only succeeded in getting to first by being too slow in getting away from a curve served up to him by Lefty McClusky, the Wildcats' twirler.

The ground rules, by which the game was played, accounts for the large size of the score. Every time a ball is knocked over the fence it counts for a two-bagger. According to the Outside Rooms, whose business it is to take care of the balls that go over, two-baggers were as plentiful yesterday as drops of water in a cloudburst.

There is no way of getting a complete score of yesterday's game, as Skinny Shaner, one of the official score keepers, forgot his duty, and Mars, the Wildcats' mascot, ran away with the paper upon which Mr. Shaner was keeping the tab for our reporter. We may safely state, however, that no one played an errorless game.

Up till the last of the ninth inning it looked as if the Wildcats had the game cinched. The score then stood 35 to 34 in their favor when "Beans," the "Timperiners'" left fielder, who up till that time had not connected with the ball at all, accidentally knocked over the fence, with a man on second and a man on third, bringing them both in and winning the game.

The second game of the series take place to-morrow and, judging from yesterday's game, there is no telling what will happen.

As agreed upon the Timperiners own the dollar-and-a-quarter ball which was used in yesterday's game. It is only their property, to do what they want with. Shrimp Flynn has asked Boob to get it in to-morrow's game, but he has not yet answered. He might get mean and refuse, and if he does a home-made ball will be used.

Emily Merton and a few of her friends viewed yesterday's game from the fence and joined in the jeering, taking nobody's side, but cheering every time a ball went over the fence.

Synopsis of the First Instalment

Chief Inspector Winter of Scotland Yard is called upon to investigate the murder of a beautiful young French woman, a former favorite. Her maid, who is rendered hysterical by the crime, cries that Rupert Osborne, a young American millionaire, killed her mistress. Winter is endeavoring to locate Furneaux, artist of his assistants, whom he considers best able to unravel the mystery, but in the meantime has set another, Inspector Clarke, to investigating. Clarke has found a taxicab driver, whose testimony locates a man resembling Osborne near the scene of the crime at the time of its commission, but Osborne apparently has a perfect alibi.

CHAPTER I.—(Continued)

MR. WINTER'S tone had suddenly become dryly official, and the other man, fearing a reprimand, added:

"I admit, sir, I ought to have told you sooner, but I don't want to make too much of the incident. The taxicab chauffeur does not know Mr. Rupert Osborne by sight, and I took good care not to mention the name. The unknown was dressed like Mr. Osborne, and looked like him—that is all."

"Who is the driver?"

"William Campbell — cab number XI4001. I have hired him to-morrow morning from 10 o'clock, and then he will have an opportunity of seeing Mr. Osborne—"

"Meet me here at 9:30, and I will keep the appointment for you. Until—until I make other arrangements, I intend to take this Feldheim Mansions affair into my own hands. Of course, I should have been delighted to leave it in your charge, but during the past hour something of vastly greater importance has turned up, and I want you to tackle it immediately.

"Something more important than a so-called murder?" Clarke could not help saying.

"Yes. You know that the Tsar comes to London from Windsor to-morrow? Well, read this," and Winter, with an impressive air of one who communicates a state secret, handed the Paris message.

"Ah!" muttered Clarke, gloating over the word "Anarchists."

"Now you understand," murmured Winter darkly. "Unfortunately these men are far too well acquainted with me to render it advisable that I should shadow them. So I shall accompany you to Charing Cross, point them out and leave them to you. A live monarch is of more account than a dead actress, so you see now what confidence I have in you, Mr. Clarke."

Flushed a Little

Clarke's sallow cheeks flushed a little. Winter might be a genial chief, but he seldom praised so openly.

"I quite recognize that, sir," he said. "Of course, I am sorry to drop out of this murder case, as I have got a few first-rate points. I haven't told you yet about the stone!"

"Why—what stone?"

"The stone that did for Miss de Bercy. The fiat was not thoroughly searched last night, but this morning I examined every inch of it, and under the piano I found—this."

He produced from a pocket something wrapped in a handkerchief. Unfolding the linen, he rose and placed on the blotting-pad, under the strong light of a shaded lamp, one of those flint implements the archæologist calls "celts," or "flint axheads." Indeed, no expert eye was needed to determine its character. The cutting edge formed a perfect curve; two deep indentations showed how it had been bound on to a handle of bone or wood. At the broadest part it measured fully four inches in length the same, thickness about three-quarters of an inch. That it was a genuine neolithic flint could not be questioned. A modern lapidary might contrive to chip a flint into the same shape, but could not impart that curious bloom which apparently exudes from the heart of the stone during its thousands of centuries of rest in prehistoric cave or village mound. This specimen showed the gloss of antiquity on each smooth facet.

But it showed more. When used in war or the chase by the fearsome being who first fashioned it to serve his savage needs, it must often have borne a grisly tint, and now again each side of the strangely sharp edge was smeared with greyish-red dust, while some black hairs clung to the dried clots which clustered on the irregular surfaces.

Sentiment finds little room in the retreat of a chief inspector, so Winter whistled softly when he set eyes on this weird token of a crime.

"By gad!" he cried, "in my time at the Yard I've seen many queer instruments of butchery—ranging from a crusader's mace to the strings of a bass fiddle—but this beats the lot."

"It must have come out of some museum," said the other.

"It suggests a tragedy of the British Association," mused Winter aloud.

"It ought to supply a first-rate clew, anyhow," said Clarke.

"Oh, it does; it must. If only—"

Checked Himself

Winter checked himself on the very lip of indiscretion, for Clarke detested Furneaux. He consulted his watch.

"We must be off now," he said briskly. "Leave the stone with me, and while we are walking to Charing Cross I can give you a few pointers about these Anarchist pests. Once they are comfortably boxed up in some cafe in Old Compton street you can come away safely for the night, and pick them up again about midday to-morrow. They are absolutely harm—I mean they cannot do any harm until the Tsar arrives. From that moment you must stick to them like a limpet to a rock; I will arrange for a man to relieve you in the evening, nor shall I forget to give your name to the Embassy people when they begin to scatter diamond plus around."

Soon he meant to act a part, Winter Clarke was prowling at the heels of these redoubtables, Antoine Descartes and Emile Jacot.

Once Clarke was safely shelved, Winter called the firm tactfully to mind and was driven to Feldheim Mansions. An unerring instinct had warned him at once that the murder of the actress was no ordinary crime; but Clarke had happened to be on duty when the report of it reached the Yard a few minutes after 8 o'clock the previous evening, and Winter had heralded the mischance which deprived him of the services of Furneaux, the one man to whom he could have left the inquiry with confidence.

The very simplicity of the affair was baffling.

Mademoiselle Rose de Bercy was the leading lady in a company of artistes, largely recruited from the Comedie Francaise, which had played a short season in London during September of the past year. She did not accompany the others when they returned to Paris, but remained, to become a popular figure in London society, and was soon in great demand for her contes drolen at private parties. She was now often to be seen in the company of Mr. Rupert Osborne, a young American millionaire, whose tastes ordinarily followed a less frivolous bent than he showed in seeking the society of an undeniably chic and sprightly Frenchwoman. It had been rumored that the two would be married before the close of the Summer, and color was lent to the statement by the lady's withdrawal from professional engagements.

Sof ar as Winter's information went, this was the position of affairs until a quarter to eight on the night of the first Tuesday in July. At that hour, Mademoiselle de Bercy's housemaid either entered or peered into her mistress's drawing-room, and saw her lifeless body stretched on the floor. Shrieking, the girl fled out into the hall and down a flight of stairs to the ball-porter's little office, which adjoined the elevator. By chance, the man had just collected the letters from the boxes on each of the six floors of the block of flats, and had gone to the post; Mademoiselle de Bercy's personal maid and her cook, having obtained permission to visit an open-air exhibition, had, it seemed, been absent since six o'clock; the opposite flat on the same story was closed, the tenants being at the seaside, and the distraught housemaid, pursued by phantoms, forthwith pleaded for the strain, so that the ball-porter, on his return, found her lying across the threshold of his den.

Found Her Dead

He summoned his wife from the basement, and the frightened girl regained a partial consciousness. It was difficult to understand her broken words, but such as they were, they sent the man in hot haste to the flat on the first floor. The outer and inner doors were wide open, as was the door of the dining-room, and sufficient daylight streamed in through two lofty windows to reveal something of the horror that had robbed the housemaid of her wits.

The unfortun te French woman was lying on her back in the centre of the room, and the ball-porter's hurried scrutiny found that she had been done to death with a brutal ferocity, her face almost unrecognizable.

But until the return of the French maid, Pauline, from the exhibition, could it be determined beyond doubt that robbery was not the motive of the crime, for she was the only person in the house that mistress's jewels were untouched. A gold purse was found on a table close to the door of the drawing-room, given one glance at the terrifying spectacle that met her eyes, and was straightway bereft of her wits.

The Chief Inspector was turning over in his mind the salient features of the affair when his automobile swept swiftly out of the traffic and glare of Knightsbridge into the quiet street in which stood Feldsham Mansions. A policeman had just strolled along the pavement to disperse a group of curious people gathered near the entrance, so Winter stopped his cab at a little distance and slightly unobserved.

He walked rapidly inside and found the ball-porter at his post. When the man learnt the visitor's identity he seemed surprised.

"Mr. Clarke has him here all day, sir," he said, "and, as soon as he left, another gentleman came. I thought I must say that I hasn't bothered me much—" this with a touch of resentment, for the ball-porter's importance was enhanced by his connection with the tragedy.

"Another gentleman!" This was incomprehensible, since Clarke would surely place a constable in charge of the flat. "What name did he give?"

"He's up there at this minnit, sir, an here's his card."

Winter read: "Mr. Charles Furneaux, Criminal Investigation Department, Scotland Yard."

"Well, I'm jiggered!" he muttered, and he sidled fast to the fire of the ball-porter's amazement by disregarding the elevator and rushing up the stairs, three at a time.

CHAPTER II.

Darkness

WINTER felt at once relieved and displeased. Twice during the long had his authority been disregarded. He was willing to ignore Clarke's method of doing out important facts because such was the man's secretive nature. But Furneaux! The urgent message sent to every place where they might reach him, each and all summoned him to Scotland Yard without the slightest reference to the Feldsham Mansions crime. It was with a stiff upper lip, therefore, that the Chief Inspector acknowledged the salute of the constable who admitted him to the ill-fated French woman's abode. Furneaux was the right man in the right place, but Furneaux must first receive an official reminder of the claims of discipline.

The subdued electric lights in the well revealed within a vista of Oriental color blended with Western ideals of comfort. Two exquisitely fashioned lamps of hammered iron, rifled from a Pekin temple, softened by their dragons and lotus leaves of pale green glass, supported globes within them. Praying carpets, frayed by the deserts of Araby, covered the geometric design of a parquet floor, and bright-hued draperies of Mirzapur hid the rigid outlines of British carpentry. A perfume of joss-sticks still clung to the air; it augmented the sensation of a fictitious refinement than the lower of a fashionable lady in the West End of London.

First impressions are powerful, and Winter felt himself the spell of the unusual here, but his impassive face showed no sign of this when he asked the constable the whereabouts of Mr. Furneaux.

"Up there, sir," said the man, pointing to a door.

Winter noted instantly that the floor creaked beneath his light tread. The rugs deadened his footsteps, but the parquetry was polished to a high degree, and he perceived, almost impossible for anyone to traverse an oval flooring of that type without revealing the fact to ordinarily acute ears. Once when his heel fell on the bare wood, it rang with a sharp yet hollow note. It seemed, somehow, that the place was empty—that it missed its presiding spirit.

Oddly enough, as he remembered afterwards, he hesitated with outstretched hand in front of the closed door. He was doubtful whether or not to knock. As a matter of fact, he did tap slightly on a panel before turning the handle. Then he

LUCILLE LA VERNE IS SEEN AS A STAR IN A HARBEN-BOOK PLAY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The vigorous modeled heroine of Will N. Harben's widely-read novel stepped from the book to the stage at the Shubert Theatre last evening and for four acts carried a heavier load than falls to most women. In making a play from the novel Miss Lucille LeVerne did her own dramatizing, which, with acting the heroine, at least kept her out of mischief.

In fact so much of "Ann Boyd" was Lucille LaVerne that you really wondered why Mr. Harben should have presented himself at all during the performance. But he did, and persistent friends in the back of the theatre insisted upon a speech, which he hadn't prepared and couldn't deliver. Lucille looked dignified and contented, and was apparently pleased with the evening's work.

"Ann Boyd" started merrily to rural tunes, with types and "atmosphere" scattered carelessly about a village store. It was a busy day for anybody, as the first time was spent in accosting Ann, who you easily gathered was a kind of all-round good fellow among the community. Only since a local boarding house keeper had not let him be the fearful repute she that she villagers have voiced.

Ann Is a Female Job.

While listening to Ann's early history, so delightfully projected into the early evening, you wept just enough to believe that she would prove a terrible person, hungry for gore and reeking with sin. But Miss LaVerne showed none of this in her quiet entertainment—she exhibited the patience of a female Job, which was really quite refreshing.

You might call "Ann Boyd" an example of modern squatty drama, for it is the typical production that had been fitted up for Miss LaVerne real well, and handled with nice view in each of the first two acts. The squatty scene at night was indeed a picture worth seeing.

Miss LaVerne's Ann Boyd was rugged in the core, but a trifle too generous in the face of the humiliation that was inflicted upon her by the man who had been the minister to the town drunkard. But she weathered that rough spot, and came on an even keel, growing hard and cold in turn, and finally softening to meet the daughter of her bitterest enemy from the standpoint of hers in general.

And let it be known that the rescued girl was just a beautiful flower—and her in the yard called her that behind her back. And what they called her mother would not stand in print.

A Rake with a Capital R.

He was the village rake with a capital R—but he could not, which, of course, under the circumstances, deepened his sin. As played by Clinton Preston, this hotstrung young ruffian was true to his type in every minute of his villainous role. Miss Frederic Moore was the beautiful blonde flower of the Georgian wilderness, and made the most of a bad bargain.

Others in the cast whose efforts were particularly noticed were Carolyn Lee, who seemed bad news generally as Emily Wakeman, who reeked a new mark as a sour old woman; and Will Deming, who gave himself to the task of playing the sweet young hero without flinching. He was too good to be real.

The performance really belonged to Miss LaVerne, and she gathered it gracefully into her arms.

Boston Theatre.

Back again in "The Old Town."

A breath of the West, a face of bronze; Any old town they may call their own,
The magpie pair, Montgomery and Stone!

Officer, they're in again. But let 'em stay. That's what they all said last night at the Boston Theatre. Any show that will stand repetition and gain friends by it. Is a pretty good show. "The Old Town" is all of that.

It is understood that the Khedive of Egypt has prohibited Montgomery and Stone from playing in that country. The "Khe" is afraid that they will make the mummies sit up and the pyramids laugh and crack his face. Be that as it may, they are always a welcome sight when Montgomery and Stone, in the domain of the Sacred Cow.

George Ade contributed to "The Old Town" entertainment in the way of some choice words and comedy situations, and a few jokes. Then it was up to Montgomery and Stone, and a mighty fine job of help. This word, "help," is not used in any invidious sense, but to indicate means that while the two principals are always a good show themselves, they are not the whole show in "The Old Town."

From start to finish there is a dash and variety in this musical comedy that keeps the audience keyed to a high pitch of delight.

The dancing would terrify and discourage Terpsichore. From happiness and kids one is prompted to swallow, Indians and dancers. From Florida the audience is whisked to the very heights of joy, and then it is certains in company with a Mrs. Malaprop with wonderful command of language and a good old miner-husband who still has a lot to live and learn. They furnish about a fortune in it.

The local manipulations of Mr. Stone are a revelation even to those who are familiar with the Stone methods. He deals with the various western shows. Stone has met them all right down in the South Seas, and the native hula hula girls have them can lunch him.

The cast is the same as when the play was produced here early in the season and includes Richard Carle, Edna Wallace Hopper, Reed, Flossy Hope, and many others of people.

Keith's.

There is a mirth-fest at Keith's this week. Leading this runway of fun is Nat M Wills, "the happy tramp," who is known from coast to coast as the "tramp king." Wills has a lot of brand new material that makes his set one of the best things he has ever done. His new monologue, "To England by Cattleboat," is one of the funniest vaudeville records.

Every player received an enthusiastic greeting from her Boston friends. She lost but none of her power to entertain in the years upon the stage. She appears in various roles on a delightful vaudeville bill is a little figure with a large head, the latter being that of Miss Hilda.

One of the most satisfactory musical acts in vaudeville is the "Operatic Four-some." It consists of two episodes, "Cupid Lifts and "The Cream of Vienna." A company of young men and women give admirable renditions of selections from popular operas. Howard and Bland made a hit in their sketch, "Back in Wellington." Three comedienne were visitors of "Them were happy days" and their new "Home sweet home act," is probably the best thing they have done.

A dramatic novelty is the sketch "On a Side Street," by Homer Miles and company. Mr. Miles as Ulmer, the janitor, untangles a web of difficulties surrounding the beautiful young heroine. The company acquits more effectually a very importunate and effective detective. The act is very cleverly worked out.

Meehlich brothers are a clever pair of dancers, and Mlle. Arteena, Nevarro and Mlle. Arteena are equilibrists of superior merit. Their finishing act of Lane and O'Donnell is a hit.

Grand Opera House.

"The Parish Priest," Daniel L. Hart's pleasing Irish comedy, opened a return engagement in this city at the Grand Opera House last night and was well received by an appreciative audience. The play is interesting from the time it is the fall of the curtain, and is wholesome, sweet and clean. It is well deserving of the long uninterrupted success it has enjoyed. The role of Father Whalen is well handled by Frank Adair, who makes of him a lovable man, delightfully witty and free to life. Mr. Adair plays the role with an ease and naturalness that compels commendation and is equally as appealing in the pathetic moments as in the more dramatic scenes during the last two acts of the piece. He has a strong baritone voice and the numbers rendered by him in the singing were well in each approval. Frank Young, as Billy Cassidy, J. J. Dunn, as James Welsh, and William Morris, as Frank Bonner, as attorney, were all good. Miss Beatrice Arthur makes a charming heroine as Agnes Cassidy.

Waldron's Casino.

The specialty numbers of the Jardin de Paris supplied a most appropriate programme of fun at the two performances at Waldron's Casino theatre yesterday. The vaudeville section of the bill was as follows:

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The Four Marvelous Mells contributed the main event on the new programme at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday.

Columbia Theatre.

The entertainment at the Columbia yesterday was supplied by the Big New Sensation company of burlesque performers, presenting two comic burlettas and an olio, filling rounded out one of the strongest slugging shows of the season.

Scenic Temple.

New pictures and vaudeville made up the programme at the Scenic Temple yesterday. There was also an orchestra concert.

Orpheum Theatre.

The big feature of the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday was furnished by Crimins and Gore, whose eccentricities supplied the factor of crazy nonsence during the day. There were a dozen or so original novelties on the programme and several new picture films.

Genee for One Day.

Adeline Genee will return to Boston for a single performance at the Colonial next Friday afternoon, when she will present a dancing pantomime called "The Dryad."

Hub Theatre.

Among the many new features at the Hub Theatre yesterday were the Anderson sisters, who headed the bill with some lively comedy and singing.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The New Jersey Lilies" company began a week's engagement at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. Two spirited burlettas and several vaudeville numbers made up the programme.

Howard Athenaeum.

A new athletic feature was presented at the Old Howard yesterday, when Jimmy Gardner of Lowell, holder of the middleweight championship, was seen in a musical of boxing, called "Fun in a Training Camp." The burlesque attraction was "The Merry Maidens" company.

Plays That Remain.

"The Commuters" entered upon its eleventh week of the Park Theatre last evening.

The ninth and final week of "The End of the Bridge" at the Castle Square Theatre was begun yesterday.

The Prince of Pilsen" began its final week at the Hollis last evening.

"Pair o' Jacks" began the two final weeks of its engagement at the Colonial last evening.

The last week of "The Virginian" was begun at the Globe Theatre yesterday.

Richard Carle entered upon a new week in "Jumping Jupiter" at the Tremont last evening.

Next Week's Bills.

But few attractions will be offered at the theatres next week. John Craig and his Castle Square players will present "The Merchant of Venice," the Aborn Opera Company will give "Carmen" at the Boston Opera House, "The Rejuvenation of Dixie" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, and the Globe Theatre will present one of the legitimate dramatic classics in a season of motion pictures and vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

The next attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre will be Aphie James and her company in a new play by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the novelist and dramatist, entitled "Judy O'Hara."

There will be a revival of "A Country Girl" at the Tremont Theatre, beginning on Monday, May 15, following the engagement of Richard Carle in "Jumping Jupiter."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

While the advance has been very largely at the expense of shorts, transactions indicate the existence of enough strength to move the market still further in the direction it is going. The slumbering short interest is beginning to wake up and realize its danger.

$ $ $

Another factor of strength in the market is the remarkably small evidence of labor trouble. The demonstrations under the Sherman law are due to disputes which have been in progress for some time. The general situation as between capital and labor seems to be very harmonious.

$ $ $

The stability of the market the last few months has amply persuaded investors to make purchases, and last, and perhaps most important, there is a public realization that Congress is making a gigantic bluff in regard to tariff reform.

$ $ $

It is not entirely clear whether the recent activity of the brokerage wires leading into Washington has any direct connection with the widely advertised tariff program. The only thing that can be said with certainty is that buying orders came into Washington in larger volume on those days when the newspapers had most to say under Washington date lines of the drastic tariff reforms being planned.

$ $ $

Canadian Pacific continues its advance, but the movement is of little interest to State street, although the volume of trading in the shares is quite large. Very few persons in the Street have the stock, and the price, which makes it unobservable for speculation, even though one may believe in it, has barred the Lake Wawasina class, and its movements can no longer be of special interest.

$ $ $

Steel and Reading attract the most attention. The former has been moved up by the knowledge that some large orders for railroad equipment will be made public within a few days. As some of the most conservative interests controlling the stock are for the account of railroad men, it is only natural for the covering movement to begin in advance of the orders being announced. Critique of the tariff reform bluff at Washington will also help Steel in Reading the buying is very large of a speculative character, and is backed by some of the strongest interests and by many experienced dealers, who made a good showing in its last monthly statement.

$ $ $

Weakness in Denver & Rio Grande issues has led to a revival of the old rumor that the dividend will be reduced. The issue is delightfully witty and free to life. Mr. Adair plays the role with an ease and naturalness that compels commendation and is equally as appealing in the pathetic moments as in the more dramatic scenes during the last two acts of the piece. He has a strong baritone voice and the numbers rendered by him in the singing were well in each approval. Frank Young, as Billy Cassidy, J. J. Dunn, as James Welsh, and William Morris, as Frank Bonner, as attorney, were all good. Miss Beatrice Arthur makes a charming heroine as Agnes Cassidy.

$ $ $

It must always be remembered that the Street never gives personal reasons for the expense of income, and if there really is a feud between the heads of Kuhn-Loeb and the House of Gould, there will be no difficulty in getting the sense of investment the House of Kuhn-Loeb got into the Missouri Pacific and Wabash bonds for a chance to get out at a profit. In the meantime, therefore, they will interfere with the rehabilitation of Missouri Pacific.

$ $ $

With prices of high-grade bonds within a fraction of the highest of the year, the demand is better than at the top of the buying movement last January. With the prospect of continued ease in money and record-breaking crop, investors may expect the present buying movement to continue for some time. This belief is strengthened by the fact that most of the issues have suffered a set-back in proportion to the remainder of the year, thus removing all appearance of the railroads swamping the market with new security issues.

$ $ $

Prices of good investment bonds are in a 3 points greater than low figures in the reaction in February and March. Bonds of roads situated in the South show the heaviest gains and reflect the better feeling in regard to those issues as a result of the general prosperity of the territory they serve and the expectations that its chief product, cotton, will continue to advance in price.

The Security Safe Deposit Company has sublet from the Commonwealth Trust Company a part of the ground floor and basement of the new Boston Stock Exchange building at No. 30 Congress street, and will install and occupy safe deposit vaults in the new building.

Total Curb sales in Boston last month footed up 1,037,983 shares, of which Bay State Gas contributed 425,700 and Amalgamated-Nevada 276,306. Rhode Island Coal footed up 21,185 shares during April.

STRONG MARKET IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, May 2.—Although the prices of most stocks were fractionally under their high prices scored during yesterday's trading, the market ruled strong and active in the early trading to-day, with considerable buying by persons said to be representing large interests.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit was a feature, quoting a gain of 1 point. Later the shades of 70 the Interborough-Metropolitan stock declined fractionally. Canadian Pacific dropped 1 point to 256⅝. Missouri Pacific shaded off ¾, while Reading, Pennsylvania and Western Maryland were quoting gains running from ⅛ to ⅜. Steel was quiet and shaded off ⅛. The preferred was unchanged. American Can continued strong, the common and the preferred quoting small fractional gains. Among the group of industrials price changes were confined to fractions and about equally divided between gains and losses.

Some strength prevailed on the curb, but trading in general was without feature, and prices of practically the entire list were unchanged.

Market leaders on the London exchange were quoting gains running from ¼ to ⅝ over the opening quotations. There was 27,000 shares of industrials, the price group of the United States army outside of the busy outfitting, for what bids fair to be the most complete tour of the Republic of Mexico ever before undertaken.

Up to the present time, the "Build-dog" days have been unusually cool and without real rout or weather conditions for exactly that season, and the last time we traveled across and through thirty-nine different states we encountered the bitter cold and rain, snow and sand, forded rivers and creeks and ploughed through sand, mud and the debris of river bottoms and over mountains and obstacles of all kinds. Taking distance into account around the world, has imposed a strain upon the car that four times that distance would not on city pavements.

GRANT TURNS OFF FAST LAPS

By J. C. KERRISON.

Harry Grant, the two-time winner of the Vanderbilt, showed a few fast laps on the Long Island Motor Parkway yesterday. With George Sanford and Harry Houpt, he took the Alco car over to Long Island and put her through her paces.

The car showed an average of over seventy-five miles an hour for a considerable period. So well satisfied was the party with the performance of this car, which is the one that captured both Vanderbilt cups events, that it will shortly be shipped to Indianapolis for the 500-mile sweepstake.

Grant will go to the western city about the 10th, and will remain there until the close of the race meet.

The 10th will see a veritable stable of race-drivers established on the Indianapolis Speedway, and from then until the day of the race one can expect to hear stories of remarkable speed in that city.

* * *

Having covered the longest continuous automobile journey in the world and traveled in more parts of the United States than any other automobile, the Abbott-Detroit "Bull-dog," with a total mileage of 27,000 miles, is quartered in the military campaign of the United States army outside San Antonio, Texas, and is doing what bids fair to be the most complete tour of the Republic of Mexico ever before undertaken.

Up to the present time, the "Bull-dog" has been driven continuously and without rest or weather conditions for exactly nine months, and in that time has traveled across and through thirty-nine different states, encountering the bitter cold and rain, snow and sand, forded rivers and creeks and ploughed through sand, mud and the debris of river bottoms and over mountains and obstacles of all kinds. Taking distance into account around the world, has imposed a strain upon the car that four times that distance would not on city pavements.

Women's Burden—Sorrow and Care

We asked you the other day to look at a picture of a man unable to get work because of his age. Many sympathetic comments have been called forth by that picture.

Here is another picture, one that the Angel Gabriel, if he can look through roofs and ceilings, sees every day in every city and town and village.

This is the picture of woman, upon whose shoulders rests the heaviest burden of life—care, anxiety and sorrow, ALL MADE HARDER AND HEAVIER BY A SENSE OF HELPLESSNESS.

We do not print this picture to write about it, but rather to have you THINK about it.

How many stories might be told by this one picture?

The story of a child gone wrong, after the mother had given years to its care.

The story of a child dead after days of suffering for the child and of agony for the mother.

The story of a brutal husband, whose coming is expected and dreaded.

The story of drunkenness hanging over life like a black cloud darkening the past and all the future.

The story of affection disappointed, of confidence betrayed.

All the world's sorrows weigh more heavily upon woman than upon man. The woman cannot fight back, cannot defend herself, cannot find forgetfulness in dissipation and noisy company.

This figure of a woman, beautifully and simply drawn, tells the story of the ending of hope and happiness for millions of women in this world.

Let your imagination and your knowledge of life say what the story is.

This is certain, the man ranks with monkeys and dogs who does not realize how heavy and unfair a load is put upon the shoulders of women, especially those that are poor.

The man is heartless or ignorant, or both, who does not wish that equal justice, equal voice in the making of laws, should at least give to woman the protection that has been denied to her through all these centuries.

Cleaning Up West Point

A new order has gone forth at West Point. General Barry has put a ban upon the wandering chicken and the nomadic duck. Likewise on the tourist with his peanuts, his banana peels and his eggshells, who has been wont to desecrate with impunity the orderly lawns of the military post.

Chicken coops may still be kept in the yards of soldiers, but they must be of uniform size and design, painted the same color and moved as far back as possible.

As for the officers, no more will they be allowed the unsightly cow shed and other similar buildings for the housing of brute creation.

The enlisted men must wear blouses, and instead of roaming about in their shirt sleeves they will be made into things of beauty.

From the river excursion boats thousands of passengers may view with longing the enticing prospect, but they will sigh in vain to scatter their eggshells and their luncheons on the greensward of their country.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

REAL BUTTERMILK

Editor AMERICAN:

Is the buttermilk sold at the various dairies and soda fountains in Boston real buttermilk, which is, as I understand it, the residue after butter is churned—or is it something else?

I am very fond of buttermilk, and drink a lot of it during the Summer, so I should really like to know what I am drinking. Some people tell me that it is absurd to think that buttermilk is produced in such quantities, and hold that what we get is simply skim milk chemically treated.

DRINKING WATER ON TRAINS

Editor AMERICAN:

For the benefit of traveling men and others who read your paper we would like you to suggest to Mr. Mellen or others in control of railroads that they make certain improvements in regard to their water supply, both on trains and in stations. I have noticed and been very much annoyed at not being able to get a glass of water either at stations or on the train in the Winter months. Why don't they give us water all the year round? From two patrons of all Massachusetts railroads.

PAYING RENT IN ADVANCE

Editor AMERICAN:

The question was raised recently in Springfield shortly after a tenement house fire: "What is the legal and practical status of the burned-out tenant who has paid rent in advance, and in general the legal and economic right of this prevailing custom?"

The writer then goes on to say: "Is it not a principle of economics that risk is part of business, and is it not unbending a real and hard-and-fast risk upon the tenant to demand thirty days advance payment for what he may never receive? Does the landlord carry a liability insurance to secure the tenant and also pay him interest? Or is he enabled to avoid interest himself by taking it from his tenant?

"Time was, not so long ago, when the tenant paid his rent on the first day of the following month for an occupancy he already had enjoyed, and the tenant who did this promptly was considered the good tenant; now it is said that every apartment block and many individual landlords require 30 days' advance payment, and one instance is known where the tenant who was three days in arrears, not of his due, but the thirty days' advance, was visited expressly by the landlord and requested to make payment on the spot, with as scant courtesy as if he had been a flagrantly delinquent debtor. This, too, where other terms had been agreed upon. 'Thirty days' rent, even for an average tenement, is a large sum for the average tenant to risk or lose interest on. If advance payment must be made, why should it not be weekly, as wages are paid? And, anyway, is it right, legally, economically or morally?"

What do you think?

Senators Adams, Gates, Nash and Hibbard—Why Should YOU Vote Against the Income Tax?

The House of Representatives this year is a good body of men. Either the lobby has so far let it alone or it is beyond the control of the lobby. It has represented the best sentiment of the people of the State.

But the Senate has not yet been purged of its corporation members. The cleansing process has begun, and the Senate is better than in former years. It passed the bill which will help to protect the citizen in his right of a trial by jury. That was an act creditable to the Senate and is evidence of improvement.

But the great test will come on the income tax vote. The income tax will separate the sheep from the goats. Senators will show who are heeding an overwhelming popular sentiment when they vote on the income tax amendment. This measure can scarcely be said to have the usual two sides to a question.

It only proposes to restore to our national government that power which every independent government in the world now possesses. It restores to our national government that power which we enjoyed for one hundred years, and which one great judge declared saved our union in the Civil War.

It restores to our national government what a bare majority of the Supreme Court took away, when that majority was obtained by the changing of the opinion of one judge over night.

It restores to our government the power of collecting the fairest tax that was ever levied. It restores to our national government a necessary power of taxation, without which an important resource of our government in times of danger is taken away.

Who can vote against such a proposal upon high and patriotic grounds? No argument has ever been made against it except that argument which is too selfish, narrow and sectional to be worth the slightest consideration.

There are some Senators whose records point to the hope that they will be sound on this bill.

Senators Adams of Marblehead, Gates of Westboro, Hibbard of Lowell and Nash of Hanover have not indicated their intentions concerning this measure. We hope that they are favorable.

Why should they sacrifice themselves for Senators Lodge and Crane? Those gentlemen did not dare to vote against the amendment in Congress and have left it to the State Senate to kill.

SENATORS ADAMS, GATES, NASH AND HIBBARD, WHY SHOULD YOU VOTE AGAINST A MEASURE WHICH YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS, WHICH THE PRESIDENT AND BOTH HOUSES OF CONGRESS FAVOR AND AGAINST WHICH THERE IS NO DECENT ARGUMENT?

When the campaign is hot in your districts next Fall, how will you, who vote against it, explain that vote to your constituents? Will you dare to tell them of the power of the lobby and the burden of campaign expenses which that lobby can lighten?

VOTE WITH YOUR CONSCIENCE AND YOU WILL NOT HAVE TO EXLPAIN, AND THE CAMPAIGN EXPENSES WILL NOT BE SO HEAVY.

The Hobo

By BERTON BRALEY

THE wife an' kids they thinks me dead.
Which same is just as well,
For, till I left, the life they led
Was nothin' very swell;
I worked along from day to day
An' gave 'em most I made,
But guys don't git much fancy pay
Who works with pick an' spade!

I worked with pick an' spade, my lads,
Ten mortal hours a day,
Grew worn an' bent to meet the rent
An' keep the wolf away.
I s'pose the wife has got to scrub
The way she used to do,
But I ain't eatin' half the grub
An' cussin' of it, too;
I'm gittin' hand-outs when I kin,
An' workin' when I must,
Er lookin' out the jail I'm in
Er ploddin' through the dust.

Er ploddin' through the dust, my lads,
Forgetful of my kin,
An' glad to be so loose an' free
Although it is a sin!

An' life ain't got no problems now
Ner worries that is deep,
For any bo kin toil you how
To git yer grub an' sleep;
From Frisco Town to Sandy Hook,
Key West to Portland, Maine,
My lazy hobo trail is took
By foot, er boat, er train.

By foot, er boat, er train, my lads,
An' never fare I pay.
I haven't found the place I'm bound
But I am on my way!

The Grand Trunk and the New Haven

Editorial published in the Lynn Evening News, written by George B. Armstead, the editor.

Competition in railroading is even more to be desired than in many other lines of business, so we are gratified that the Boston AMERICAN is organizing a movement to induce the Canadian Grand Trunk system to extend its lines to Boston. This proposition would be a good thing for the port of Boston, a good thing for Boston's business houses and industrial plants. Also it would be a distinct advantage to all the territory around about Boston. No matter how responsive a railroad monopoly may be to public desire, and usually it is not particularly responsive, competition usually gives better facilities and in the best check where governmental regulation has not proved strong enough to maintain the proper balance of power between the railroad monopoly and the people. In Massachusetts there is almost no regulation and the railroad does about as it desires.

This movement to have the Grand Trunk enter Boston naturally leads us to consideration of the announcement by the New Haven road that July 1 the control of the Boston & Albany will pass to Mr. Mellen's corporation, for that is what the announcement conveyed in effect if not in its wording. It was stated that the New York, New Haven & Hartford has agreed to assume half the annual deficit of the Boston & Albany, which last year amounted to more than $300,000, and that James H. Hustis, assistant general manager of the Albany, will become vice-president and general manager of that division for the New Haven after July 1.

This indicates one step toward the outright acquirement of the Boston & Albany by the Mellen lines, which virtual merger means a more tight grip on New England by the New Haven road—a more complete and irresistible monopoly.

Yes, let us endeavor to get Grand Trunk connections and more of the Roosevelt brand of railroad regulations—the only check under monopolistic conditions.
